OUR POSTAL ARRANGEMENTS.—The Post-Office Department is widely extending the mail service over the United States, and is especially active in taking advantage of the improved facilities offered by the expansion of the American railway system. On june 30th last there were over fifty thousand miles of railway postal routes in operation, as compared with thirty-four thousand miles on the same date in 1868, and during the fiscal year 1870-71 just closed, the number of miles of railway over which the mails were carried was 107,000,000, an increase of thirty-two per cent. over the number of miles for the fiscal year 1867-68.

WANTS TO SURRENDER.—Reverdy Johnson, whose dinner-eating propensities will long be remembered, favors the proposed abandonment, by the Democratic party, of the ground it has hitherto occupied. He recommends the following policy for adoption by the next National Democratic Convention: "Let the members of the Convention place before the country some name which all Conservatives as well as Democrats can support, and announce, if they declare any political principles, nothing which would be offensive to either Conservative Republicans or Democrats. If this shall be done, I believe that our triumph will be certain, and surely all should unite in labor to that end who value the Constitution of the nation, and know the worth of political and civil liberty."

A GLORIOUS SUMMARY.

RECORD OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY—WHAT IT IT HAS DONE FOR LABOR.

1st. Among the first acts of the Republican Congress, after some necessary measures to resist the Democratic Rebellion, was the adoption of the Homestead law under which the whole mass of the public domain is opened to the possession and ownership of laboring men upon the condition of settlement and cultivation, at the nominal price of $10 for 160 acress.

2nd. Provision was made by which this vast property is largely enhanced in value, and rendered accessible to men of limited means, over the lines of the Trans-continental Railroad—the construction of which, has been delayed under Democratic rule, by the fear that free labor would possess the rich inheritance, to the exclusion of slave labor.

3d. The whole system of servile labor was abolished by the Republican party, in spite of the united and persistent opposition of the Democracy in Congress and on the battle field.

4th. Again, the whole mass of unrequited labor was lifted to the dignity of the country's defenders, thereby giving it enlarged opportunities, enabling it to command the attention and the sympathies of the nation, and rendering its future subjection to bondage absolutely impossible.

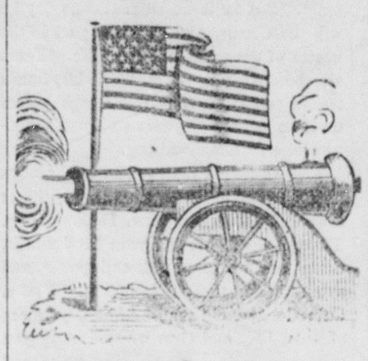
5th. This whole class was endowed with citizenship and all its rights and advantages—against all of which acts, the Democrats in Congress and in the States, recorded a united negative—yet it is easy to see, that each successive step added immeasurably to the dignity and power of labor.

6th. The whole remaining public lands of the South, were reserved from sale, and appropriated to the exclusive use of actual settlers, by which, the landless laborers of that section, come to the ownership of more than 45,000,000 acres sufficient for half a million of homes of 40 acres each, and by which, also, the further progress of land monopoly in that section is forever stopped.

7th. It has given guaranty by a solemn and unanimous declaration of the House of Representatives, that the future land policy of the party shall be in the interest of individual occupation and ownership, and opposed to sales or grants under conditions, which will admit the further growth of personal or corporate monopoly.

8th. And finally it has given practical evidence of its fidelity to the principles of land distribution to actual occupants, through its organized land committees, and in the defeat of numerous land grant bills, at the recent session of Congress.

The Elections!



REPUBLICANS AGAIN VICTORIOUS!

NEW YORK REDEEMED!!

TAMMANY REBUKED!

WISCONSIN, ILLINOIS, MINNESOTA, ARKANSAS and MASSACHUSETTS!

ALL REPUBLICAN!!

DEMOCRACY ROUTED EVERYWHERE!

REPUBLICANS SHOUT OUT THE VICTORY!

ONE HUNDRED ROUNDS FROM OUR BIG GUN!

We refrained from giving election news last week, thinking that we would be able to give the official vote in this number. As yet no official returns have been received, but enough is known to warrant us in making one of the biggest "crows" of the season. Our rooster a Democratic Judas Iscariot Bird, is so sick that we cannot use him. He generally stands on his head, but the recent elections has given him the chicken cholera and he is now six cum rous.

The elections on the 7th day of November in the States of New York, Massachusetts, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Arkansas have all gone gloriously Republican.

We carry New York by about 30,000, carry both branches of the Legislature and elect a large majority of the Anti-Tammany candidates in the city. The rout of Tammany was complete. Boss Tweed, the greatest thief of the age was elected to the Senate in the City of New York, by 12,000 majority of Democratic votes, a loss of 10,000. His election we presume will be contested. Neither the Watchman nor Reporter has had a word to say against the election of Tweed—Fred why do you not speak out?

WISCONSIN.—Washburn, Republican candidate for Governor, has been elected over Doolittle, by about 8,000 majority and both branches of the Legislature are also Republican.

MINNESOTA.—The Returns from this State indicate the election of the Republican State Ticket by from 8,000 to 10,000 majority.

MASSACHUSETTS.—The old Bay State went Republican of course, the only change being an increased majority over last year.

NEW JERSEY.—Parker, democrat, is elected Governor of this State, but both branches of the Legislature are Republican.

ILLINOIS.—The Republican majority in Illinois for Congress at large is from 20,000 to 30,000. The Union Ticket in the city of Chicago, elected by a large majority.

KANSAS.—The Republicans have carried Kansas by an increased majority.

MARYLAND.—The Democratic majority in Maryland is about 12,000. This is greatly below their usual majority. The Republican gain being at least 18,000 votes. Next year Maryland will be all right for Grant.

MISSISSIPPI.—This State gives about 15,000 Republican majority.

Maryland and Virginia are the only States, from which the Democracy can get any comfort; and as both these States were with the Rebellion, it is right and proper, they should be Democratic now.

In all the great loyal States of the country the Republican party has made a clean sweep, and leaves us a bright prospect for

THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN.

No wonder Kurtz and Meek, the Pittsburg Post and all the other Democratic editors and papers are sour, sullen, sick—deathly sick. It cannot be otherwise when they look over the result of the elections this year. All is darkness, gloom, despair, leaving them without hope of success in the Presidential election in November next. The following list of the States in which elections have taken place this year, with the electoral vote of each, shows the Democratic party in such a reduced condition as to forbid even the faintest hope of electing a President of that political faith:

REPUBLICAN.		DEMOCRATIC.
Connecticut	6	New Hampshire	5
Massachusetts	12	New Jersey	7
Rhode Island	4	Maryland	7
New York	33	Virginia	10
Pennsylvania	26	Kentucky	11
North Carolina	9	Texas	6
Ohio	21	West Virginia	5
Mississippi	7
Illinois	16
Maine	7
Arkansas	5
Wisconsin	8
Iowa	8
California	5
Minnesota	4
	171		51

This the Boston Journal considers a very good season's work for the Republican party—and we agree with it in opinion. But next season's work will be better. We will hold New York and California transferred to the Republican column this year, and next year we will add New Hampshire and New Jersey. No one but a purblind politician will pretend to claim the vote of New Hampshire for the Democrats next year, when the fact is clear that it went that way last spring wholly in consequence of local issues. New Jersey, at the late election gave a divided result, choosing a Democratic governor and a Republican legislature; and we put the State in the Democratic column only because the majority for Governor appears to be the larger. It is not necessary to add to this exhibit the electoral votes of the States that held their elections last year, in order to throw light on the Presidential prospects of 1872, which are sufficiently satisfactory to Republicans.

Now let every Republican in Centre county go to work in good earnest and help just a little—just what he can do and what he is in duty and honor bound to do and Centre county will be redeemed next fall. Let every Republican in the county subscribe for the REPUBLICAN, and induce his Democratic neighbors to do the same and we will guarantee success. The people are honest all they want is to learn the gigantic workings of, and frauds perpetrated upon them by the Court House Ring. Work on work ever. After the total rout of the Tammany thieves, the Republicans of Centre should not grow weary, nor despair of carrying the county. All hail! the party of freedom and Equal Rights!

PICKING DEAD MENS' BONES.

"Invisable," the Harrisburg correspondent of the Blair county Radical, after paying an elegant and merited tribute to the memory of Col. David Stanton, late Auditor General elect, concludes the paragraph with the following caustic allusion to Democratic history:

"The vacancy which his death will occasion after the expiration of the term of General Hartranft, will be filled by appointment by the Governor, for the full term for which Dr. Stanton was elected. This will be of immense political benefit to Governor Geary, but will be of none to the Democracy. And it is a wonder it will not. That party has been kept alive on grave-yard victuals—has subsisted on the funeral feasts and cast-off garments of official dead, and to day the possibility of a distribution of political shroudcloth, enters into every campaign. And they do not always await the slow and uncertain process of natural dissolution. It came to them in 1841. They assisted it by a slow poison in 1840. But nothing short of the bullet was swift enough in 1865. In each of those years the party fattened. In our own State, too, death has been the last hope of the party. It proved a help in time of Senatorial need last winter, and may do so again this. Repudiated among living men, the Democratic party, like the pirates of the sea, or the vultures of the mountain, exists only on the public plunder and official offal that disease, assassination and chance throw in its way.

At a business meeting of the Society of the army of the Cumberland, held in Detroit, a proposition to erect an equestrain statue of Gen. Thomas, in Washington, D. C., was unanimously adopted. Major General Rosecrans has been chosen president of the association, and Dayton, Ohio, is the next place of meeting.

NATIONAL FINANCES—WHAT HAS BEEN ACCOMPLISHED.

The Record of the Republican party shows that taking a plundered and exhausted treasury, burdened with the enormous responsibilities of the slaveholder's Rebellion, which it crushed, and of the succeeding Democratic conspiracy to present reconstruction against which the Government and loyal people in the South are still struggling, that it has carried the nation through in triumph and is now able to present as the result of an harmonious Republican Administration, the following striking proofs of economy and honesty:

1st. That in the first two years and one month of the administration of President Grant there has been an actual reduction of the public debt to the amount of $215,765,663 74.

2nd. That the annual interest charged to the people has, within the same period, been reduced in the sum of $12,062,997,96—consequently, affording permanent annual relief from taxation to that amount.

3rd. That the net gold discount actually realized to the public treasury on the purchase of bonds, by which purchase the debt has been mainly reduced, is $14,585,838 56.

4th. That, in consequence of the measures and policy of the Republican Congress and Administration, the public credit, although greatly disturbed by the war, advanced during the period from the early part of the year 1861 (the close of the Democratic administration of President Buchanan (to March 1st, 1869—reaching an aggregate appreciation, as applied to the then existing values and principal of the public debt, of three hundred and sixty-five millions of dollars; and, by the still more efficient administration of President Grant, the public credit, as referred to the now existing value and debt, (April 1st, 1871,) has been further advanced, within a little more than two years, making an appreciation during this short period, as applicable to the new existing debt, of six hundred and fifteen millions of dollars; also showing that the appreciation since the close of the last Democratic administration early in 1861, applicable to the existing values and debt, is eight hundred and sixty-five millions of dollars.

5th. Within the period from March 4th, 1869, to April 1st, 1871, the appreciation of the National and National Bank currancy was eighteen (18) per cent., making an aggregate appreciation of $95,000,000 which has accrued to the people in consequence of the advancement of the public credit by the Republican policy.

6th. Reduction of annual expenditures for the fiscal year 1869 '70, as compared with the last year of Johnson's administration, $56,532,193 07 As compared with the last year of Buchanan's administration, upon the same basis, 36 cents less, per capita, estimating the population $40,000,000, making an annual saving of $14,400,000.

7th. The internal taxes and customs duties have, since the close of the war for the suppression of the rebellion, been reduced by the amount per annum of $251,848,827 33.

8th. The postal service has been extended and increased in efficiency, and its comparative expenditures materially reduced.

HOW TO PREVENT STRIKES.

Messrs. Briggs & Co., of Yorkshire, England, have put an end to strikes in their large establishment. They have divided their capital into small shares of £10 each, and every employee is encouraged to buy as many shares as he can. Not only are the workingmen contented with this system, but the profits are actually double what they were before. Practical, plodding England seems certainly to have given us here a most valuable hint for the settlement of the difficulties existing between capital and labor.

We commend the example of Messrs. Briggs & Co., as worthy of imitation. Let American capitalists share the profits of our several industries with skilled labor. Let him realize that there is something besides want and pauperism in reserve for his old age, or for the family that he may be called upon to leave behind. Then there will be no further controversy about hours or wages. The act of Messrs. Briggs & Co., is simply an act of honesty and justice. Who will imitate it?

Census returns for 1871 show the total population of the New Dominion to be 3,484,924, an average increase of about twelve and a half per cent., since 1861.

THE NATIONAL REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

[From the Philadelphia Press.]

The Secretary of the National Union Republican Executive Committee has called a meeting of that body, at Washington, on the 11th of January next, to select a site for the next National Convention of the party, which will nominate candidates for President and Vice President to be voted for next November, and officially embody in a "platform" the principles of the party.

Local influences have been activeiy at work for some time past to secure the coveted prize, and now that the date of holding the committee meeting has been fixed, the competition will be brisker than ever. The considerations that will govern the selection, if no other motives are introduced, will be convenience and accommodation. Boston wants it in honor of its unwavering fidelity; New York as an acknowledgment of its recent great victory; the same selfish reason impels San Francisco to importune; St. Louis because it will harmonize the factions and strengthen the organization in Missouri; Cincinnati because it has never been chosen; Washington because it is the political centre of the country, and Philadelphia because it is best suited, the easiest of access, and has more conveniences. Between the bitter rivalry of the great cities, some of the smaller towns may be successful.

Our claims, it will be seen, are the strongest. In these days of newspapers, and reading, intelligent voters, and Republican majorities, conventions exercise but little influence on public sentiment. As for the convention next year, its only work will be but to ratify the people's will as expressed through the press. The candidate for President has already been chosen, and before next May or June that for Vice President will have been fixed upon. The principles of the party are well established—liberty, justice, and equality are the substantial pillars upon which we rear our political faith.

This next will be the fifth National Convention of the Republican party, and its near approach affords an opportunity for a retrospective glance at the grand organization which has for more than ten years had in its keeping the destinies of this great nation. When the historian comes to write this period of national history, it will be with a pen of gold. Its brightness almost eclipses the early days of the Republic; the trials, sacrifices and triumphs of the war for the preservation of the Union are equal to those of the war for independence.

The first convention of the Republican party was held in Philadelphia, June 17, 1856, in pursuance of a call addressed to the people of the country, without respect to past political differences, who were opposed to the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, to the policy of the Administration of Franklin Pierce, to the extension of slavery into the Territories, and in favor of the admission of Kanses as a free State, and free and progressive ideas generally.

At this convention, from which dates the history of the organization and the new era in our national life, the cornerstone of the party—the birth of the best sentiment of the nation, and the outgrowth of the enlightened thought and liberal idea of the free institutions of the North—was laid upon the great principles of the sovereignty and indestructibility of the Government, the freedom of all men, and the equality of the citizen. The Declaration of Independence was reaffirmed, and the mission of the party proclaimed to be the restoration of the spirit of the founders. The candidates of the convention were Jno. C. Freemont and W. L. Dayton, and they carried every Free State with the exception of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois, and California. In the Electoral College they had one hundred and fourteen of the two hundred and ninety-five votes polled.

The second convention was held at Chicago, on May 16, 1860. The causes which had called the party into existence had grown until they permeated every inch of territory north of the line that limited the black shadow of slavery, and the course of events indicated that in the coming Presidential struggle the party was to sweep the country with an avalanche of free ballots. This convention again promulgated the immortal declaration "that all men are created equal; that they are endowed with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," etc. The subserviency of the Administration of James Buchanan to the slaveholders was denounced and all threats and schemes of disunion. Under this sign the party conquered. Abraham Lincoln carried every Northern and Western State, with the exception of New Jersey, and divided its electoral vote with Stephen A. Douglas.

The third convention was held at Baltimore on June 7, 1864. Grant was narrowing the lines around Richmond and Sherman had commenced his march to the sea, and the faith of the people was stronger than ever in the ultimate triumph of the Union. Not all the victories of the rebellion nor the successes and sneers of its sympathizers in the North could shake their unalterable determination to preserve its integrity. The convention gave emphatic utterance to this resolve; it declared for a vigorous prosecution of the war, and for the utter extirpation of the curse of slavery through a constitutional amendment. Abraham Lincoln was renominated, and received the vote of every loyal State save New Jersey.

This brief review brings us down to the last convention, which met at Chicago May 21, 1868, and nominated General Grant. At that time new issues had arisen. The war had ended, but not the questions arising out of it. Reconstruction was in doubt, and the social condition of the lately insurrectionary States still presented a serious problem. Repudiation loomed up as the battle-cry of the Democracy, and the integrity and honor of the nation was at stake. The subject of the freedmen, too, had a grave interest, and all who remembered the trials and sacrifices of the war, and appreciated the swift social as well as political revolution through which we were passing, and the bearing of the emancipated element upon it, looked anxiously to the convention. On reconstruction, repudiation, and other questions, the resolutions had the right ring, but the partial declaration on the right of suffrage was a hollow mockery. With this exception, the platform was honest, manful, and straightforward. Ulysses S. Grant was the nominee for President, and he swept the country.

Such is the record of the brief existence of the Republican party and its hope and promise for the future. It refers to a country saved, a Union preserved, to a great war brought to a successful termination, to diminished taxes, to a debt reduced, to a people enfranchised, to the vindication of human rights, to the establishment of every reform of the time. The progress we have made under its rule can hardly be realized; but what will it be in the future under the same beneficent auspices?

We cannot read the coming years, but, judging from the past and present, another decade will bring as wondrous a change as that we now contemplate. The dark clouds will have disappeared from the Southern sky, and peace and prosperity prevail, such as that unhappy people never before enjoyed. In every section of the land we shall have reaped the golden harvest of the seed planted in the devotion of our dead and living heroes and the free, intelligent votes of all patriots. The diffusion of the press, the spread of education, the universalism of liberty—all these mighty agents will take up the work begun in war and bring it to its full fruition. And our material progress will keep pace with our moral improvement. The continent will be spanned, not by one, but by a half dozen iron roadways, the telegraph will have become the every-day messenger of even the humblest class, our cities will be the centres of a greater commerce than even they have now in their own estimation. Population and wealth will have overflowed into every valley of the far West, a dozen new States will have been developed, and the gigantic national debt of this day be a thing of tradition.

Such is the glowing vision that spreads before us.

The Wealth of Our City.

According to carefully compiled statistics the real property of Philadelphia, subject to tax, is assessed at $502,415,853 and exempt from taxation at $50,891,223, making a total of $553,234,085. The personal property is valued at $44,079,723, of which amount $35,470,904 is money out at interest. The real and personal property subject to city tax is estimated at $511,025,582 against $500,436,882 for 1871, an increase of $10,587,800. As compared with the estimate of 1868 there is an increase this year of $56,506,192, showing a gratifying development in the wealth and resources of Philadelphia.—*Phila. Com. For the REPUBLICAN.

TRUE TILL DEATH.

BY G. W. F.

I'm sitting to-night, by the old fireside,
Thinking the thoughts of a feeble old man;
For o'er my memory, come thoughts of the tide,
That's rushed me, and pushed me along in its van.

And sitting here thinking, my childhood comes up,
I'm living again those bright sunny days;
rinking clear nectar from life's sweetest cup,
Knowing but little of adversit'ys ways.

Then out in relief stand the days I first loved,
The dark eyed maid with the soft curling hair;
And fresh is the time I risked getting "gloved,"
And received in return, a jewel so rare.

But joy and prosperity soon left my home,
When in the damp tomb I laid my love'd one;
But thought, in the cold selfish world I'd roam,
And, acting, forget all the wrong fate had done

Oh, happiness! beautiful happiness, come,
And kiss, once again, my poor callous'd heart;
And then I'll be ready—my work being done.
To cast up my account with time and depart.

For long years I've struggled and tried to forget.
But somehow the struggle's all been in vain;
For asleep or awake, memories yet,
Call up and exhibit those bright scenes again.

Though making me sad, I love to recall them,
They're all I have left of Ambition's wreck;
And regret gives place to the great joy, when
At Heaven's golden gate, my brow she shall deck.

My minist'ring Angel—she reads my heart,
She see's there a lifetime's true devotion;
That, loosing her, I've set all else apart,
Buried earth's happiness deep as the ocean.

THE TRUE AND FALSE HEART.

"What's that you say, Hayden? The Bolton Bank broke? It can't be possible!"

And Frederick Wells, who had been reclining in one chair, with his feet resting on the back of another, the very picture of indolent enjoyment, sprang to his feet, tipping over his chair, and sending the cigar he was smoking to the further end of the room.

"Yes it is; it is here in the paper, as you can see for yourself. But what is it to you? Did you have anything invested there?"

"No; but Miss Neal had—which amounts to about the same thing."

An air of intense chagrin overspread his handsome, though rather effeminate features, as he read the paragraph to which his companion pointed.

"Confound it," he muttered, "it's always my luck to have my dish tipped over just when it's full! Though I must say, if it's got to come, that I'm glad it happened the month before, rather than the month after our marriage."

Charles Hayden, a young man whose features, though less regularly formed, were expressive of far more manliness and goodness of heart, gazed at the speaker with an air of undisguised astonishment.

"Why so, Wells? You surely did not seek the hand of Miss Neal simply for her money?"

"Well, no; I can't say that. She is a most lovely and charming woman; and it really cuts me to the heart to give her up. But then I'm too poor to afford such a luxury. And Miss Neal can no more afford to marry a poor man than I a poor girl. So we're about even."

"And have you no thought for the pain that your desertion will inflict upon the heart you have won?" said Hayden, in a tone of suppressed indignation.

"Softly, my dear fellow," said Wells, who had resumed his former comfortable position, and was solacing himself with a fresh cigar. "I hardly think that it will be any such desperate affair to Miss Neal as you suppose. Indeed, I've thought several times of late, that had it not been for her foolishly high idea of the binding nature of such a promise, she would have broken the engagement herself."

"And knowing this, you would have held her to its fulfilment."

"Not being sufficiently disinterested to refuse the gift of fifty thousand dollars, I rather think I should."

"You are not worthy of a true-hearted woman, like Ellen Neal!" was the indignant response.

"Then so much the better for her, that I should leave her to be appropriated by some one, that is—you, for instance. It strikes me that you used to be somewhat interested in that quarter; now is the time, old fellow, for you to go in and win."

Charles Hayden scarcely felt or heard the covert sneer in these words, so much was he engrossed by the new-born hope that had sprung up in his heart, and which made its pulses beat so quickly and strongly.

"So you are to be married, next month, my dear?" said Mr. Thornly, to his ward, Ellen Neal.

"Yes, I believe so," was the rather indifferent reply.

Mr. Thornly studied his ward's face for a moment with his keen eyes.

"I don't believe you care two straws for Frederick Wells.

"Oh! not so bad as that, guardien," said Ellen, with a faint smile; "though I have sometimes feared that I don't give him the affection that he deserves. He seems to be very strongly attached to me."

"Humph! my opinion of Frederick Wells is, that he is too much in love with his own handsome face to be very much attached to any woman."

"You are too severe. Any way, I have promised, and cannot break my word."

Oh, no, certainly not; far better break your heart."

"I don't believe I've got any," was the laughing rejoinder. "If I have, I've never been able to discover it. Never fear for me, guardie; I dare say I shall be as happy with Frederick as with any one."

Yet in spite of these lightly spoken words, there rose up before her mental vision one with whom she knew she could be far happier. But, even if she had been free to choose, how did she know that he would choose her? True, she had sometimes fancied—but what right had she to indulge in such fancies?

When Mr. Thornly reached his office he found Frederick Wells waiting to see him; who accosted him with an air of constraint, not to say embarrasment, not at all remarkable, when we consider the awkward errand on which he came.

"I heard of Miss Neal's misfortune last evening, sir; and I assure you with deep regret."

"Miss Neal's misfortune? what the deuce d'ye mean?" said the old gentleman, gruffly, with whom the young man was, by no means, a favorite.

"Why, the failure of Bolton Bank, to be sure," Mr. Wells responded quickly, the suspicion entering his mind that the shrewd old lawyer was trying to dodge the question.

Oh, ah, yes, I think I do understand you. Well, what of it?"

"Only this, sir, that deeply as I regret the necessity, the high regard I cherish for your ward, and the knowledge that I shall be unable, at least for some years, to offer her such a home as she is accustomed to and merits, demand the sundering of our engagement."

"That is to say, in plain English, my ward, having lost her fortune, Mr. Wells no longer desires to marry her?"

In spite of all his efforts, Mr. Wells felt his cheeks tingle beneath the quiet scorn in the eyes that rested upon his countenance.

"You put it rather harshly," he said, forcing a smile; "but we won't quarrel about terms."

"Very good. All I have to say is that what you are pleased to term Miss Neal's misfortune, promises to be the best thing that could happen to her. Good morning."

When Mr. Thornly saw his ward again in the evening, his countenance wore a curious expression.

"I have important news for you, Ellen; one portion of it rather bad, but the other so good as to more than make up for it. Indeed, as I told a certain young man this morning, I consider it the best thing that could possibly happen you. First, for the bad; the bank in which your money was invested has gone up, and won't probably pay two cents on a dollar. Now for the good; in consequence of this, Mr. Frederick Wells called to express his regrets that he must relinquish the honor and happiness of making you his wife."

"Is it possible?" exclaimed Ellen. "How I have been deceived in him. I thought he loved me for myself alone. Oh, Mr. Thornly, how thankful I ought to be that I have discovered how false his heart is, before it was too late."

"Mr. Hayden is in the parlor, and wants to see Miss Ellen," said a servant, opening the door.

Ellen entered the parlor in a rather perturbed state of mind; much as she rejoiced at her escape, she could not but feel deeply grieved at this discovery of the unworthiness of him whom she had hitherto esteemed so highly, as to often reproach herself that she could not love him as he deserved.

Mr. Hayden's mind was also much disturbed, though from a very different cause.

It was in vain that that young gentleman tried to recall the neat little speech that he had conned over on his way to the house; as is usual in such cases, it completely vanished from his mind as soon as he found himself in the presence of the lady for whose benefit it was intended.

At last, making a desperate effort, he broke the rather embarrassing silence by saying:

"My dear Miss Neal, I have heard of the loss of your fortune, and cannot express what a great burthen it lifted from my heart. I was so truly rejoiced, as to quite forget—"

Here, startled by the indignant astonishment depicted upon Ellen's countenance, the poor fellow stammered, and then stopped.

"Sir—Mr. Hayden," faltered Ellen, deeply wounded at language so different from what she had anticipated. "I am at a loss to understand why you should rejoice over my misfortune."

"Dear one, I know it is very selfish in me, and yet I was never half so happy in my life when I learned that I might, without being accused of unworthy motives, tell you what a privilege I should deem it to cherish and care for you as man cherishes and cares for the dearest object of his love."

The sudden revolution of feeling caused by these words, sent warm, happy tears to Ellen's eyes.

"I thank Heaven for the reverse of fortune that has given me the rich treasure of your love," she murmured, as she laid her hand softly in his.

Half an hour later, the lovers were receiving the congratulations and the warm approval of Ellen's guardian.

The old gentleman listened silently, and with evident enjoyment to the plans they laid for the future.

"I am sorry to spoil your pretty romance of 'Love in a Cottage' and all that sort of thing," he said at last, "but the fact is, Ellen—though, as I told you, your fortune was invested in the Bolton bank, I happened to withdraw the money the week before it failed. But don't be down-hearted about it, my young friends; you'll find plenty of people who will gladly relieve you of its burthen. If you can't dispose of it in any other way, you might donate it to found a "mission school" for the "Feejee Mermaids," or some other equally as practicable missionary enterprise."

We can't say as to whether our young couple followed this suggestion, but this we know, that throughout her long and happy married life, Ellen often had occasion to bless the fortunate blunder that enabled her to discern between "THE TRUE HEART AND THE FALSE."

FIGHTING A BEAR IN A CATTLE CAR.

AN INDIAN LOCKED UP WITH BEASTS—A TERRIFIC FIGHT—MONKEYS AND SNAKES LOOKING ON—BREAD, TURNIPS, AND $8 A MONTH.

From the London (Canada) Free Press

The men on the mixed train going west yesterday morning had a pretty good-sized sensation just as the train arrived in Bothwell. As the noise of the wheels subsided unusual and excited sounds were heard issuing from a bonded car which all along the passage from the Suspension Bridge had remained under lock and key, attracting no especial notice from any one, as no one on the train seemed aware of its true contents.—Gradually the noises grew louder and more excited, scuffling was heard, accompanied by yells and imprecations from a human voice, and a series of low, fierce snarls and growls as if from an enraged and powerful animal; then a shuffling to and fro, and more excited but perfectly unintelligible exclamations. The men were at a loss what to make of all this, and marveled exceedingly. A crowd collected, and noises of the same character continued within.

There appeared to be a terrible rumpus inside the car which each moment grew more desperate and alarming. All at once a violent thumping against the door and the voice of the man, which had by this time grown more coherent, but sounded faint and smothered, broke out in exclamatory appeals, "Brek door! brek! door! Injin?" After which the struggle seemed to be renewed more furiously than ever, "Injin" giving vent to short yells of pain and distress.

No time was lost by the men outside, who proceeded at once to obey the call, and break the lock. No sooner had the door been partially opened than out sprang a strapping young Indian in a terribly excited state of mind, minus his hat, with his clothing hanging in shreds about him, and displaying several bleeding wounds. He was well nigh exhausted; but did not stop running till he got behind the station house in a place of safety, where he stood panting for breath for some minuts before any one of those who surrounded him could elicit any information from him as to the nature of the ordeal through which he had passed. That, however, was perfectly intelligible to those who witnessed his escape, for he had no sooner got clear than a large black bear came snuffling at the door, waiting to get out too and pursue his enemy like a roaring lion to devour him. On seeing the men, however, and probably not caring to jump into the immediate presence of so many persons, Bruin recoiled and sneaked into a corner, from which he glared savagely at them.

There were several other animals in the car, some of them in cages, and some securely fastened up with chains and ropes. Among them was a young cub belonging to the old bear, who at once took refuge behind his ma in the corner, apparently somewhat bashful by the appearance of so many grown men. There were also an antelope, a couple of monkeys, a wild kangaroo, some beautiful specimens of the feathered creation, and a box of snakes, which remained comfortably coiled up in their blankets, either too tired or too sleepy to take any part in the fuss. The collection, it appears, belonged to a traveling showman, who proposed to exhibit in a western town.

The Indian boy, he was scarcely out of his teens, although big and muscular, as soon as he could collect his ideas and began to realize that he was safe and sound, related that he was employed by the proprietor at eight dollars a month to attend the animals in their travels as keeper; that he had been shut up with them in the car for nearly three days, with nothing to eat but bread and turnips and with only water to drink; that the old bear had become restive in the car while on the journey, probably from hunger and thirst, and ended by committing an assault upon him, which he repelled as long as he was able to hold out.

He thought every moment he would have to give in, and consent to be eaten up for breakfast by the she-bear and her interesting offspring. Twice she got her arms fondly around him, and would certainly have hugged him to death but for the herculean strength which enabled him to throw her off and spurn her advances. Being somewhat cramped in her physical energies by the confinement and dull routine of snow life, besides not being so young as she used to be, she was the more easily overcome and failed to make as stout an attack as the circumstances seemed to demand of her. The young man from the country parts, however, was determined not to be "taken in" any more by the deceptions and allurements of side-show life, and then and there resolved to abandon a profession in which he discovered he had neither the talent nor education to shine very resplendent.

"He tink me big fool," said he; "Ingin only get $8 a month, and a chance to get ate up into the bargain. No, no, my friends; that muchly too thin! Ugh! Not for Joseph—not if he knows it."

"Don't Tell Betsey Jane."

"And, for your life, don't tell Betsey Jane!"

Mr. Nicodemus Harding, having uttered this caution in a low, earnest tone of voice, alighted from a Concord wagon in front of his own farm-house door, and stood there a few minutes in a brown study, watching the figure of his brother-in-law and the lawyer, as he drove back towards the village of W——, where the two men had just came.

Now, Betsey Jane was Mr. Nicodemus Harding's wife, a stirring, notable soul, who made more butter and cheese, and took more eggs and fowls to market in the course of a season, than any other woman for miles around. Strong, healthy and hearty, she made the housework fly, to use her own energetic expression; and if Nicodemus Harding owned his farm that day, and was well-to-do, in fact a rich man to boot, it was owing in no small measures to the skill and energy and general go-a-headativeness of his Betsey Jane. What was it, then, that the ungrateful man was about to tell her?

"It would never do, never!" thought Nicodemus to himself, shaking his head. "She'd be wanting a new carpet, or a new silk gown, or the house all painted over, or some such nonsense. No, the woman is the weaker vessel; it won't do to trust one too far. Their heads won't bear it."

So Mr. Nicodemus passed through the house, and out toward the barn, with the pre-occupied air of a hen who has an egg to lay, and don't know where to hide from the eyes of mankind to the best advantage. The kitchen was empty and silent as he went through it. But oh, if he could have seen the buxom, good-looking female who stole silently out of the pantry, and as silently followed him on his way toward the barn.

Mrs. Harding came back in about twenty minutes or so, with a face red with suppressed laughter.

"Don't tell Betsey Jane," she said, giggling into her gingham apron. "You are a very smart man, Nicodemus, and my brother, Tim Noyes, is another, and a lawyer in the bargain. Don't tell Betsey Jane, indeed! Two wretches, you deserve all you'll get, pretty soon!"

Betsey Jane said no more, but bided her time. A week passed, and then brother Tim's wagon drove up again to the door, and Nicodemus stepped into it, and was off to the village once more. Betsey Jane had asked in vain to go.

Nicodemus was bound on business—"business which a woman could not understand," he loftily exclaimed. He, lord and master, well out of sight, Betsey Jane went about that business a woman could not understand with a merry twinkle in her bright black eyes.

At four P. M. Nicodemus returned home again, looking quite as important as before. He tiptoed along through the kitchen, Betsey Jane watching him from the corner of her eye all the while. He passed out into the shed. A fragrant smell of smoke came forward to greet him—an odor of burning corn cobs gradually curing ham. Nicodemus turned deathly pale, and ran frantically forward to a large fire smouldering in the ash-house, and a large ham or two, covered over by blankets, hanging placidly there. The yell he gave brought Betsey Jane from the house instanter, to find Nicodemus groveling before the ash-house door, weeping and wailing and tearing his hair, and uttering yell after yell in despair.

"Why, bless me! what's the matter? Are you in a fit? Let me run for the camphor," shrieked Betsey Jane.

"Camphor! Bring arsenic! Bring poison of some kind—poison!" yelled Nicodemus, frantically.

"Woman, you've ruined me! Twelve thousand dollars in government bonds did I put in that ash-hole for safety just a week ago, and now you've gone and burned them to cook that cussed bacon. Pison! Pison! Pison! And let me get out of the dreary world."

"Oh!—so that was what you were not going to tell Betsey Jane! Ar'n't you ashamed of yourself, Nicodemus Harding?"

Nicodemus could not answer. He laid prostrate in the ashes and halloed.

"Get up, and don't be a fool!" said Betsey Jane, amiably. "I heard you and brother Tim conspiring at the door that day, and I watched you go to the ash-hole, and soon found out what you had hid away there. Woman is the weaker vessel, no doubt, but she don't put twelve thousand dollars where the first match that comes handy can burn it up! Here are the bonds, Nicodemus, for ten thousand and I've kept two for my honesty."

Poor Nicodemus! He gathered himself up out of the ashes, and took his bonds—what was left of them. He rather thinks it pays best, on the whole, now to tell Betsey Jane.

Waiting.

There's a chubby little infant in the cradle, has fat feet just looking out from under the blanket, his eyes sparkling with health, his fat fist jammed into his mouth. He's a mere nothing—only a baby. But he is waiting. Some day he will be a man, and will take part in the bustle of the great business life. Years are before him—long life is his, hands tender will guide him over rough places until he has man's years and man's independence. Only waiting.

There's an old man seated in the nook of the hearthstone, his head white as snow, his life almost gone. He is waiting. Though he hears not your kind words, there are voices so soft and gentle, and sympathetic, that tell him: "Wait a little longer, old man—a few days more of this life, and then we will carry you safe over. And the old man waits and listens for the glad news. He has been young, old, has traveled thorny paths and flowry walks, seen bright suns go down in the midst of dark and cruel storms, and now he knows that a few days will see him home—see his spirit hovering over the earth—up there where old are young, and where young are blessed. Only waiting.

All of us are waiting. We may go far from home, seek the bustle of business, seclude ourselves from the world, be good or bad, amass fortunes or live in poverty, and our day must come. The thought is with us, we cannot make it stay away. Death, death, and yet live as if it would never come. The infant in the cradle may not live a year—the old man in the corner may see our grave before he comes. Cannot the world change? Cannot we all be better men and women—have better, nobler thoughts—give more heed to death—seek a safer road to heaven? Are there any so good that some evil has not crept in? Are there any so bad that they could not be reformed?

Life! oh, what is life—a day—an hour? A rough journey, tears, sighs, sadness, and then the voice bids us come over the threshold of death for eternal judgment.

QUAKER LOGIC.—A skeptical young collegian confronted an old Quaker with the statement that he did not believe in the Bible. Said the Quaker:

"Does thee believe in France?"

"Yes; though I have not seen it, I have seen others who have; besides, there is plenty of proof that such a country does exist."

"Then thee will not believe anything thee or others have not seen?"

"No; to be sure I won't."

"Did thee ever see thy own brains?"

"No."

"Ever see anybody that did?"

"No."

"Does thee believe thee has any?"

PICCADILLOES.—A single snow-flake is but a very small thing; so one sin indulged may appear of but little consequence. But a number of snow-flakes falling all day long, hiding the landmarks, drifting over the doors, gathering upon mountains, to come down in avalanches and to cover trees, house, and even whole villages; each one alone may be small, but altogether they are all but irresistable. So sin indulged grows and increases, until it becomes a mighty power.

A PERFECT MAN.—The man deserving the name is one whose thoughts and exertions are for others, rather than himself; whose high purpose is adopted on just principles, and never abandoned while heaven and earth affords means of accomplishing it. He is one who will neither seek an indirect advantage by a specious word, nor take an evil path to secure a real good purpose. Such a man is one for whom a woman's heart should beat constantly while he breathes.

AN Indiana girl when asleep recites Greek poetry, but when awake is utterly ignorant of that language. This is an Indiana euphuism for saying she snores.

FASHIONABLE young ladies now entertain the idea that it is the "correct thing" to write with a quill, in imitation, probably, of Madame Disraeli.

AN orphan girl in Virginia has just smoked herself to death at the age of 100. She is now one of the few century plants of the country.

THERE is a machine in operation in East Summer, Maine, which can make thirteen thousand toothpicks in a minute.

AN Ipswitch fanatic tore out his right eye and tried to pull out his tongue, saying the Lord had ordered him to do so for his sins.

THE meanest cuss in the universe lives at Wheeling, West Virginia. He steals crape from the doors of mourning houses.

TRUE TILL DEATH.

BY G. W. F.

I'm sitting to-night, by the old fireside,
Thinking the thoughts of a feeble old man:
For o'er my memory, come thoughts of the tide,
That's rushed me, and pushed me along in its van.

And sitting here thinking, my childhood comes up,
I'm living again those bright sunny days;
rinking clear nectar from life's sweetest cup,
Knowing but little of adversit'ys ways.

Then out in relief stand the days I first loved,
The dark eyed maid with the soft curling hair;
And fresh is the time I risked getting "gloved,"
And received in return, a jewel so rare.

But joy and prosperity soon left my home,
When in the damp tomb I laid my love'd one;
But thought, in the cold selfish world I'd roam,
And. acting,forget all the wrong fate had done

Oh, happiness! beautiful happiness, come,
And kiss, once again, my poor callous'd heart;
And then I'll be ready—my work being done.
To cast up my account with time and depart.

For long years I've struggled and tried to forget,
But somehow the struggle's all been in vain;
For asleep or awake, memories yet,
Call up and exhibit those bright scenes again.

Though making me sad, I love to recall them,
They're all I have left of Ambition's wreck;
And regret gives place to the great joy, when
At Heaven's golden gate, my brow she shall deck.

My minist'ring Angel—she reads my heart,
She see's there a lifetime's true devotion;
That, loosing her, I've set all else apart,
Buried earth's happiness deep as the ocean.

THE TRUE AND FALSE HEART.

"What's that you say. Hayden? The Bolton Bank broke? It can't be possible!"

And Frederick Wells, who had been reclining in one chair, with his feet resting on the back of another, the very picture of indolent enjoyment, sprang to his feet, tipping over his chair, and sending the cigar he was smoking to the further end of the room.

"Yes it is; it is here in the paper, as you can see for yourself. But what is it to you? Did you have anything invested there?"

"No; but Miss Neal had—which amounts to about the same thing."

An air of intense chagrin overspread his handsome, though rather effeminate features, as he read the paragraph to which his companion pointed.

"Confound it," he muttered, "it's always my luck to have my dish tipped over just when it's full! Though I must say, if it's got to come, that I'm glad it happened the month before, rather than the month after our marriage."

Charles Hayden, a young man whose features, though less regularly formed, were expressive of far more manliness and goodness of heart, gazed at the speaker with an air of undisguised astonishment.

"Why so, Wells? You surely did not seek the hand of Miss Neal simply for her money?"

"Well, no; I can't say that. She is a most lovely and charming woman; and it really cuts me to the heart to give her up. But then I'm too poor to afford such a luxury. And Miss Neal can no more afford to marry a poor man than I a poor girl. So we're about even."

"And have you no thought for the pain that your desertion will inflict upon the heart you have won?" said Hayden, in a tone of suppressed indignation.

"Softly, my dear fellow," said Wells, who had resumed his former comfortable position, and was solacing himself with a fresh cigar. "I hardly think that it will be any such desperate affair to Miss Neal as you suppose. Indeed, I've thought several times of late, that had it not been for her foolishly high idea of the binding nature of such a promise,she would have broken the engagement herself."

"And knowing this, you would have held her to its fulfilment."

"Not being sufficiently disinterested to refuse the gift of fifty thousand dollars, I rather think I should."

"You are not worthy of a true-hearted woman, like Ellen Neal!" was the indignant response.

"Then so much the better for her, that I should leave her to be appropriated by some one, that is—you, for instance. It strikes me that you used to be somewhat interested in that quarter; now is the time, old fellow, for you to go in and win."

Charles Hayden scarcely felt or heard the covert sneer in these words, so much was he engrossed by the new-born hope that had sprung up in his heart, and which made its pulses beat so quickly and strongly.

"So you are to be married,next month, my dear?" said Mr. Thornly,to his ward, Ellen Neal.

"Yes, I believe so," was the rather indifferent reply.

Mr. Thornly studied his ward's face for a moment with his keen eyes.

"I don't believe you care two straws for Frederick Wells.

"Oh! not so bad as that, guardian," said Ellen, with a faint smile; "though I have sometimes feared that I don't give him the affection that he deserves. He seems to be very strongly attached to me."

"Humph! my opinion of Frederick Wells is, that he is too much in love with his own handsome face to be very much attached to any woman."

"You are too severe. Any way, I have promised, and cannot break my word."

Oh, no, certainly not; far better break your heart."

"I don't believe I've got any," was the laughing rejoinder. "If I have, I've never been able to discover it. Never fear for me, guardie; I dare say I shall be as happy with Frederick as with any one.'

Yet in spite of these lightly spoken words, there rose up before her mental vision one with whom she knew she could be far happier. But, even if she had been free to choose, how did she know that he would choose her? True, she had sometimes fancied—but what right had she to indulge in such fancies?

When Mr. Thornly reached his office he found Frederick Wells waiting to see him; who accosted him with an air of constraint, not to say embarrasment, not at all remarkable, when we consider the awkward errand on which he came.

"I heard of Miss Neal's misfortune last evening, sir; and I assure you with deep regret."

"Miss Neal's misfortune? what the dence d'ye mean?" said the old gentleman, gruffly, with whom the young man was, by no means, a favorite.

"Why, the failure of Bolton Bank, to be sure," Mr. Wells responded quickly, the suspicion entering his mind that the shrewd old lawyer was trying to dodge the question.

Oh, ah, yes, I think I do understand you. Well, what of it?"

"Only this, sir, that deeply as I regret the necessity, the high regard I cherish for your ward, and the knowledge that I shall be unable, at least for some years,to offer her such a home as she is accustomed to and merits, demand the sundering of our engagement."

"That is to say, in plain English, my ward, having lost her fortune, Mr. Wells no longer desires to marry her?"

In spite of all his efforts, Mr. Wells felt his cheeks tingle beneath the quiet scorn in the eyes that rested upon his countenance.

"You put it rather harshly," he said, forcing a smile; "but we won't quarrel about terms."

"Very good. All I have to say is that what you are pleased to term Miss Neal's misfortune, promises to be the best thing that could happen to her. Good morning."

When Mr. Thornly saw his ward again in the evening, his countenance wore a curious expression.

"I have important news for you, Ellen; one portion of it rather bad, but the other so good as to more than make up for it. Indeed, as I told a certain young man this morning, I consider it the best thing that could possibly happen you. First, for the bad; the bank in which your money was invested has gone up, and won't probably pay two cents on a dollar. Now for the good; in consequence of this, Mr. Frederick Wells called to express his regrets that he must relinquish the honor and happiness of making you his wife."

"Is it possible?" exclaimed Ellen. "How I have been deceived in him. I thought he loved me for myself alone. Oh, Mr. Thornly, how thankful I ought to be that I have discovered how false his heart is, before it was too late."

"Mr. Hayden is in the parlor, and wants to see Miss Ellen," said a servant, opening the door.

Ellen entered the parlor in a rather perturbed state of mind; much as she rejoiced at her escape, she could not but feel deeply grieved at this discovery of the unworthiness of him whom she had hitherto esteemed so highly, as to often reproach herself that she could not love him as he deserved.

Mr. Hayden's mind was also much disturbed, though from a very different cause.

It was in vain that that young gentleman tried to recall the neat little speech that he had conned over on his way to the house; as is usual in such cases, it completely vanished from his mind as soon as he found himself in the presence of the lady for whose benefit it was intended.

At last, making a desperate effort, he broke the rather embarrassing silence by saying:

"My dear Miss Neal, I have heard of the loss of your fortune, and cannot express what a great burthen it lifted from my heart. I was so truly rejoiced, as to quite forget—"

Here, startled by the indignant astonishment depicted upon Ellen's countenance, the poor fellow stammered, and then stopped.

"Sir—Mr. Hayden," faltered Ellen, deeply wounded at language so different from what she had anticipated. "I am at a loss to understand why you should rejoice over my misfortune."

"Dear one, I know it is very selfish in me, and yet I was never half so happy in my life when I learned that I might, without being accused of unworthy motives, tell you what a privilege I should deem it to cherish and care for you as man cherishes and cares for the dearest object of his love."

The sudden revolution of feeling caused by these words, sent warm, happy tears to Ellen's eyes.

"I thank Heaven for the reverse of fortune that has given me the rich treasure of your love," she murmured, as she laid her hand softly in his.

Half an hour later, the lovers were receiving the congratulations and the warm approval of Ellen's guardian.

The old gentleman listened silently, and with evident enjoyment to the plans they laid for the future.

"I am sorry to spoil your pretty romance of 'Love in a Cottage' and all that sort of thing," he said at last, "but the fact is, Ellen—though, as I told you,your fortune was invested in the Bolton bank, I happened to withdraw the money the week before it failed. But don't be down-hearted about it, my young friends; you'll find plenty of people who will gladly relieve you of its burthen. If you can't dispose of it in any other way,you might donate it to found a "mission school" for the "Feejee Mermaids," or some other equally as practicable missionary enterprise."

We can't say as to whether our young couple followed this suggestion, but this we know, that throughout her long and happy married life, Ellen often had occasion to bless the fortunate blunder that enabled her to discern between "THE TRUE HEART AND THE FALSE."

AN INDIAN LOCKED UP WITH BEASTS—A TERRIFIC FIGHT—MONKEYS AND SNAKES LOOKING ON—BREAD, TURNIPS, AND $8 A MONTH.

From the London (Canada) Free Press

The men on the mixed train going west yesterday morning had a pretty good-sized sensation just as the train arrived in Bothwell. As the noise of the wheels subsided unusual and excited sounds were heard issuing from a bonded car which all along the passage from the Suspension Bridge had remained under lock and key, attracting no especial notice from any one, as no one on the train seemed aware of its true contents.—Gradually the noises grew louder and more excited, scuffling was heard, accompanied by yells and imprecations from a human voice, and a series of low, fierce snarls and growls as if from an enraged and powerful animal; then a shuffling to and fro, and more excited but perfectly unintelligible exclamations. The men were at a loss what to make of all this, and marveled exceedingly. A crowd collected, and noises of the same character continued within.

There appeared to be a terrible rumpus inside the car which each moment grew more desperate and alarming. All at once a violent thumping against the door and the voice of the man, which had by this time grown more coherent, but sounded faint and smothered, broke out in exclamatory appeals. "Brek door! brek! door! Injin?" After which the struggle seemed to be renewed more furiously than ever, "Injin" giving vent to short yells of pain and distress.

No time was lost by the men outside, who proceeded at once to obey the call, and break the lock. No sooner had the door been partially opened than out sprang a strapping young Indian in a terribly excited state of mind, minus his hat, with his clothing hanging in shreds about him,and displaying several bleeding wounds. He was well nigh exhausted; but did not stop running till he got behind the station house in a place of safety,where he stood panting for breath for some minuts before any one of those who surrounded him could elicit any information from him as to the nature of the ordeal through which he had passed. That, however, was perfectly intelligible to those who witnessed his escape, for he had no sooner got clear than a large black bear came snuffling at the door, waiting to get out too and pursue his enemy like a roaring lion to devour him. On seeing the men, however, and probably not caring to jump into the immediate presence of so many persons, Bruin recoiled and sneaked into a corner, from which he glared savagely at them.

There were several other animals in the car, some of them in cages, and some securely fastened up with chains and ropes. Among them was a young cub belonging to the old bear, who at once took refuge behind his ma in the corner, apparently somewhat bashful by the appearance of so many grown men. There were also an antelope, a couple of monkeys, a wild kangaroo, some beautiful specimens of the feathered creation, and a box of snakes, which remained comfortably coiled up in their blankets, either too tired or too sleepy to take any part in the fuss. The collection, it appears, belonged to a traveling showman, who proposed to exhibit in a western town.

The Indian boy, he was scarcely out of his teens, although big and muscular, as soon as he could collect his ideas and began to realize that he was safe and sound, related that he was employed by the proprietor at eight dollars a month to attend the animals in their travels as keeper; that he had been shut up with them in the car for nearly three days, with nothing to eat but bread and turnips and with only water to drink; that the old bear had become restive in the car while on the journey, probably from hunger and thirst, and ended by committing an assault upon him, which he repelled as long as he was able to hold out.

He thought every moment he would have to give in, and consent to be eaten up for breakfast by the she-bear and her interesting offspring. Twice she got her arms fondly around him, and would certainly have hugged him to death but for the herculean strength which enabled him to throw her off and spurn her advances. Being somewhat cramped in her physical energies by the confinement and dull routine of snow life, besides not being so young as she used to be, she was the more easily overcome and failed to make as stout an attack as the circumstances seemed to demand of her. The young man from the country parts, however, was determined not to be "taken in" any more by the deceptions and allurements of side-show life, and then and there resolved to abandon a profession in which he discovered he had neither the talent nor education to shine very resplendent.

"He tink me big fool," said he; "Ingin only get $8 a month, and a chance to get ate up into the bargain. No, no, my friends; that muchly too thin! Ugh! Not for Joseph—not if he knows it."

"Don't Tell Betsey Jane."

"And, for your life, don't tell Betsey Jane!"

Mr. Nicodemus Harding, having uttered this caution in a low, earnest tone of voice, alighted from a Concord wagon in front of his own farm-house door, and stood there a few minutes in a brown study, watching the figure of his brother-in-law and the lawyer, as he drove back towards the village of W——, where the two men had just came.

Now, Betsey Jane was Mr. Nicodemus Harding's wife, a stirring, notable soul, who made more butter and cheese, and took more eggs and fowls to market in the course of a season, than any other woman for miles around. Strong, healthy and hearty, she made the housework fly, to use her own energetic expression; and if Nicodemus Harding owned his farm that day, and was well-to-do, in fact a rich man to boot, it was owing in no small measures to the skill and energy and general go-a-headativeness of his Betsey Jane. What was it, then, that the ungrateful man was about to tell her?

"It would never do, never!" thought Nicodemus to himself, shaking his head. "She'd be wanting a new carpet, or a new silk gown, or the house all painted over, or some such nonsense. No, the woman is the weaker vessel; it won't do to trust one too far. Their heads won't bear it."

So Mr. Nicodemus passed through the house, and out toward the barn, with the pre-occupied air of a hen who has an egg to lay, and don't know where to hide from the eyes of mankind to the best advantage. The kitchen was empty and silent as he went through it. But oh, if he could have seen the buxom, good-looking female who stole silently out of the pantry, and as silently followed him on his way toward the barn.

Mrs. Harding came back in about twenty minutes or so, with a face red with suppressed laughter.

"Don't tell Betsey Jane," she said, giggling into her gingham apron. "You are a very smart man, Nicodemus, and my brother, Tim Noyes, is another, and a lawyer in the bargain. Don't tell Betsey Jane, indeed! Two wretches, you deserve all you'll get, pretty soon!"

Betsey Jane said no more, but bided her time. A week passed, and then brother Tim's wagon drove up again to the door, and Nicodemus stepped into it, and was off to the village once more. Betsey Jane had asked in vain to go.

Nicodemus was bound on business—"business which a woman could not understand," he loftily exclaimed. He, lord and master, well out of sight, Betsey Jane went about that business a woman could not understand with a merry twinkle in her bright black eyes.

At four P. M. Nicodemus returned home again, looking quite as important as before. He tiptoed along through the kitchen, Betsey Jane watching him from the corner of her eye all the while. He passed out into the shed. A fragrant smell of smoke came forward to greet him—an odor of burning corn cobs gradually curing ham. Nicodemus turned deathly pale, and ran frantically forward to a large fire smouldering in the ash-house, and a large ham or two, covered over by blankets, hanging placidly there. The yell he gave brought Betsey Jane from the house instanter, to find Nicodemus groveling before the ash-house door, weeping and wailing and tearing his hair, and uttering yell after yell in despair.

"Why, bless me! what's the matter? Are you in a fit? Let me run for the camphor," shrieked Betsey Jane.

"Camphor! Bring arsenic! Bring poison of some kind—poison!" yelled Nicodemus, frantically.

"Woman, you've ruined me! Twelve thousand dollars in government bonds did I put in that ash-hole for safety just a week ago, and now you've gone and burned them to cook that cussed bacon. Pison! Pison! Pison! And let me get out of the dreary world."

"Oh!—so that was what you were not going to tell Betsey Jane! Ar'n't you ashamed of yourself, Nicodemus Harding?"

Nicodemus could not answer. He laid prostrate in the ashes and halloed.

"Get up, and don't be a fool!" said Betsey Jane, amiably. "I heard you and brother Tim conspiring at the door that day, and I watched you go to the ash-hole, and soon found out what you had hid away there. Woman is the weaker vessel, no doubt, but she don't put twelve thousand dollars where the first match that comes handy can burn it up! Here are the bonds, Nicodemus, for ten thousand I've kept two for my honesty."

Poor Nicodemus! He gathered himself up out of the ashes, and took his bonds—what was left of them. He rather thinks it pays best, on the whole, now to tell Betsey Jane.

Waiting.

There's a chubby little infant in the cradle, has fat feet just looking out from under the blanket, his eyes sparkling with health, his fat fist jammed into his mouth. He's a mere nothing—only a baby. But he is waiting. Some day he will be a man, and will take part in the bustle of the great business life. Years are before him—long life is his, hands tender will guide him over rough places until he has man's years and man's independence. Only waiting.

There's an old man seated in the nook of the hearthstone, his head white as snow, his life almost gone. He is waiting. Though he hears not your kind words, there are voices so soft and gentle, and sympathetic, that tell him: "Wait a little longer, old man—a few days more of this life, and then we will carry you safe over. And the old man waits and listens for the glad news. He has been young, old, has traveled thorny paths and flowry walks, seen bright suns go down in the midst of dark and cruel storms, and now he knows that a few days will see him home—see his spirit hovering over the earth—up there where old are young, and where young are blessed. Only waiting.

All of us are waiting. We may go far from home, seek the bustle of business, seclude ourselves from the world, be good or bad, amass fortunes or live in poverty, and our day must come. The thought is with us, we cannot make it stay away. Death, death, and yet live as if it would never come. The infant in the cradle may not live a year—the old man in the corner may see our grave before he comes. Cannot the world change? Cannot we all be better men and women—have better, nobler thoughts—give more heed to death—seek a safer road to heaven? Are there any so good that some evil has not crept in? Are there any so bad that they could not be reformed?

Life! oh, what is life—a day—an hour? A rough journey, tears, sighs, sadness, and then the voice bids us come over the threshold of death for eternal judgment.

QUAKER LOGIC.—A skeptical young collegian confronted an old Quaker with the statement that he did not believe in the Bible. Said the Quaker:

"Does thee believe in France?"

"Yes; though I have not seen it, I have seen others who have; besides, there is plenty of proof that such a country does exist."

"Then thee will not believe anything thee or others have not seen?"

"No; to be sure I won't."

"Did thee ever see thy own brains?"

"No."

"Ever see anybody that did?"

"No."

"Does thee believe thee has any?"

PICCADILLOES.—A single snow-flake is but a very small thing; so one sin indulged may appear of but little consequence. But a number of snow-flakes falling all day long, hiding the landmarks, drifting over the doors, gathering upon mountains, to come down in avalanches and to cover trees, house, and even whole villages; each one alone may be small, but altogether they are all but irresistable. So sin indulged grows and increases, until it becomes a mighty power.

A PERFECT MAN.—The man deserving the name is one whose thoughts and exertions are for others, rather than himself; whose high purpose is adopted on just principles, and never abandoned while heaven and earth affords means of accomplishing it. He is one who will neither seek an indirect advantage by a specious word, nor take an evil path to secure a real good purpose. Such a man is one for whom a woman's heart should beat constantly while he breathes.

AN Indiana girl when asleep recites Greek poetry, but when awake is utterly ignorant of that language. This is an Indiana euphuism for saying she snores.

FASHIONABLE young ladies now entertain the idea that it is the "correct thing" to write with a quill, in imitation, probably, of Madame Disraeli.

AN orphan girl in Virginia has just smoked herself to death at the age of 100. She is now one of the new century plants of the country.

THERE is a machine in operation in East Summer, Maine, which can make thirteen thousand toothpicks in a minute.

AN Ipswitch fanatic tore out his right eye and tried to pull out his tongue, saying the Lord had ordered him to do so for his sins.

THE meanest cuss in the universe lives at Wheeling, West Virginia. He steals crape from the doors of mourning houses.

My Old Woman and I.

We have crossed the bridge o'er the middle of life,
My old woman and I;
Taking our share in the calm and the strife,
With the travelers passing by;
And though on our pathway the shadows are rife,
There's light in the western sky.

Some losses and crosses, of course we've had,
My old woman and I,
But, bless you! we never found time to be sad—
And a very good reason why;
We were busy as bees and wern't so mad
As to stop in our work to cry.

On our changeable road as we journey along,
My old woman and I,
The kindly companions we meet in the throng
Made our lives like a vision fly;
And therefore the few that imagined us wrong
Scarcely cost us a single sigh.

The weak and the weary we've striven to cheer,
My old woman and I,
For we each of us thought that our duty while here,
Was to do as we'd be done by,
In the hope to administer a balance clear
When the reckoning day is nigh.

A Word to Young Men.

It is easy to be a good man as a poor one. Half the energy displayed in keeping ahead that is required to catch up when behind, would gain credit, give more time to attend to business, and reputation of those who work for gain. Be prompt; honor your engagements. If you promise to meet a man, or do a certain thing at a certain moment, be ready at the appointed time. If you go out on business, attend promptly to the matter on hand, then as promptly attend to your own business. Do not stop to tell stories during the business hours. If you have a place of business, be there when wanted. No man can get rich by sitting around stores and saloons. Never "fool" on business matters Have order, system, regularity and promptness. Do not meddle with business you know nothing of. Never buy any article you do not need, simply because it is cheap. and the man who sells will take it out in trade. Trade is money. Strive to avoid harsh words and personalities. Do not kick every stone in the path—more miles can be made in a day by going steadily on, than by stopping to kick. Pay as you go, a man of honor respects his word as he does his bond. Aid, but never beg. Relieve others when you can, but never give what you cannot afford to, simply because it is fashionable. Learn to say No. No necessity for snapping it out, dog fashion; but say it firmly and respectfully Have but few confidants. Use your brains rather than those of others. Learn to think and act for yourself. Be vigilant. Keep ahead rather than behind the times.

Young men, cut this out, and place it, by careful perusal, in the golden storehouse of your brain and if you, find that there is folly in the argument, let us know.

An old Merchant's Word.—Hon. Peter. C Brooks, of Boston, who left one of the largest fortunes ever amassed in this country, on being asked what rule he would recommend to a young man as most likely to secure success answered, "Let him mind his own business;" and to a similar inquiry. it has been said that Robert Lenoz, of New York, well remembered as one of the most distinguished merchants ever known in that city, once answered:" Let him be beforehand with his business-" One answer seems to include the other, as no man can be beforehand with his business unless he minds it.

Whither we Tend. Eternity has no gray hairs. The flowers fade, the heart withers, man grows old and dies; but time writes no wrinkles on eternity! O! stupendous thought! The ever-present, the unborn, undecaying and undying—the endless chain composing the life of the universe. Earth has its beauties, but time shrouds them for their grave; its places are but the gilded sepulchre; its pleasures bursting bubbles. No so in the untried bourne. In the dwelling of the Almighty can come no footsteps of decay.

Self-Reliance. Young men. don't rely upon your friends. Don't rely on the good name of your ancestors. Thousands have spent the prime of life in vain hopes of aid from those they call friends—and thousands have starved because they had a rich father. Rely upon the good name which is made by your own exertions, and know that the best friend you can have is an unconquerable determination united to decision.

The merits of our actions consist not in doing extraordinary, but in doing ordinary actions well.

Look out—for winter is fast approaching.

A MIRACLE!

MR. SAMUEL BELL, of W. E. Schmertz & Co., Wholesale Boot and Shoe Manufacturers, 31 Fifth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., has been afflicted with chronic rheumatism for thirty years, from his right hip to his foot, having to use a crutch and a cane, and at times so painful as to utterly incapacitate him from attending to his business. Having tried every remedy known, without effect, except Gilliland's Pain Killer, he was finally induced to try it. A second application enabled him to lay aside his crutch, and a third effected a permanent cure. Mr. Bell, as a popular and well-known citizen, is a living monument of the efficacy of that great medical discovery, Gilliland's Pain Killer. The afflicted should ask their grocer or druggist for it, and try its wonderful power. Mr. Gilliland, we understand, wants a respectable agent in every town and country for it. PHILADELPHIA MONEY MARKET.

Trade during the week has been characterized by the usual degree of dullness for this period of the year, but there is a fair demand for merchandise to meet the current wants of the various markets and an entire absence of speculative movements in any direction. Jobbers in staple goods, for immediate consumption, report moderate activity in some departments, and with the advent of cold weather a good business is anticipated in winter goods. We have very little change to notice in prices, and there is a firm tone throughout. The export trade has been very dull, owing to the lack of margins to stimulate shipments. The anticipated changes in the existing tariffs at the ensuing Session of Congress cause some distrust among importers, who are anxious to reduce their stocks at a slight concession in current figures, but distributors hold off in view of a possible decline in prices later in the season.

There has been a decided improvement in the condition and tone of the Money market during the past week, owing to the increased supply of funds seeking investment, and the gradual return of confidence. Call loans are readily obtainable at 6@8 per cent, with good collateral pledges, and a large business has been transacted, owing to the active movement in all classes of speculative investments. Mercantile paper has been offered in average aomunts, and taken more freely at 8@10 per cent. outside the banks. The market promises to work easy during the remainder of the year, notwithstanding a considerable drain of currency to move the Cotton and Pork crops is inevitable, and the possibility that the calling in of Five-twenties on the first of December, and the payment of insurance losses to Chicago may create some disturbance. As an offset, however, the bank resources are likely to grow stronger with the winding up of the active business season, and its lessened demand for money for mercantile purposes, while the heavy amount of dividends to come upon the market for ri-envestment between now and the close of the year—estimated as high as a hundred millions—cannot fail to have a beneficial effect upon the finances.

Gold has been comparatively dull and easier, under the influence of a better supply and a falling off in the regular business demand. The tendency of the market is still downward. Foreign Exchange has been unsettled and higher, owing to the scarcity of first-class bills, resulting from the heavy shipments of Government Bonds and other American securities.

The following are the fluctuations in Gold during the past week:

	HIGHEST.	LOWEST.
Saturday	111⅝	111⅝
Monday	111⅝	111⅝
Tuesday	111⅝	111⅝
Wednesday	111⅝	111⅝
Thursday	111⅝	111
Friday	111⅝	111⅛

MAKE A CLEAN SWEEP.

That which is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. A Republican robber is not a whit better, nor less unsavory, than a Democratic thief, nor is there the slightest reason why he should not be treated in the same way, and visited with the same punishment and disgrace. The news which we get from Washington, that the Grand Jury of the District have found a true bill against ex-Congressman Stokes, of Tennessee, in the matter of the bounty frauds and false muster rolls to which we recently referred, is therefore cause for congratulation among all honest men. Now let us hope that no notions of party interest or clemency may be allowed to delay, embarrass or tincture the prosecution, or in any manner to sway the proceedings against him; and that if he is guilty, as there certainly seems every reason to suppose him, he may be meted punishment in exact accordance with the measure of his crimes. Political rascality and corruption is all the more demoralizing when the knave professes to hold exalted views and to be governed by elevated principles. The scurviest and scabbiest curb-stone loafer who voted for Tweed is a far less loathsome and despicable object than the fair-seeming man who cloaks his private villainy under the mask of being an exponent of healthy and honorable public opinion.—Joseph Surface, the libidinous "man of sentiment," is a worse type of humanity than Jack Sheppard, and it is sincerely to be hoped that every man in the Republican ranks who preaches patriotism and practices dishonesty may be relentlessly brought to book. Only in this way can the reaction in favor of honesty which has set in be made to purify the whole political atmosphere and benefit the entire country.—Pittsburg Commercial.

THE KU-KLUX REIGN OF TERROR.

SYNOPSIS OF A PORTION OF THE TESTIMONY TAKEN BY THE CONGRESSIONAL INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE.

No. V.

The following are the principal cases of outrage developed in the examination of witnesses from the State of South Carolina before the Committee in session in Washington in July last:

SOUTH CAROLINA.

In Laurens county ten or twelve persons were killed in a riot the day after the State election, in October, 1870, the United States troops having just left, and the citizens being unprotected. In Newberry county, May, 1871, a Mr. Young, colored, Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, was fired upon and wounded; also, his wife and child. White as well as colored officials were "waited upon." In Fairfield and York counties, various white officials were waited upon, and warned to resign. At Union county Court-house, December, 1870, nine men were taken out and hung by four or five hundred disguised men. In Fairfield disguised men made their appearance twice, in the night, and "notified certain officers that if they did not resign within given time they would come and attend to them." In Spartansburg county, November, 1870, Samuel T. Poinier, was ordered away, and his life threatened. In October, 1870, two whites and three negroes were whipped most brutally by disguised men. John Genobles, a white man aged sixty-eight, was whipped by men wearing disguises. A witness testifies that in this county some fifty or sixty cases of violence occurred, which was inflicted by persons in disguise upon either negroes or white men.

In York county, October, 1870, Charles D. O'Leefe was brutally assaulted. He had held positions as deputy collector, assistant marshal for taking the census, president and secretary of the Union League; slept in the woods for twenty-three or twenty-four nights, being in dread of the Ku-Klux. He had organized a Union League of one hundred and ninety-six members, and was brutally assaulted as he was about taking the train to leave. Witness knew of a man who was taken out of the house, tied and whipped, receiving seventy lashes of the buggy traces.

In Sumpter county, October, 1870, J. J. Neason was visited at night by men in disguise, and called out. He asked them what they intended to do? The answer was: "To whip you." He said, "For what? Am I guilty of any crime?" The reply was: "No; but you keep a country store, and you allow Republicans to hold their meetings and their barbecues here, and you have been a manager of elections for the last five or six years; and we intend to stop it. We give you ten days to close up your business, and then we will give you five days more in which to leave the country." Witness had built a school-house on his place for the benefit of the colored children; they would not allow it to remain on the place, and burned it down. They stated his building the school-house was one thing they had against him. He was visited a second time in March, 1870, by at least twenty-five or thirty disguised men, all armed with double-barreled shot-guns, who took off his coat to whip him, but he begged off. In the same neighborhood, David Andrews, aged sixty-five or seventy, an ex Union soldier, and father of six children, was doing well in business, but the Ku-Klux "closed him up."

At Manning, in Sumpter county, they drove out Captain Bigger and Mr Coleman; Bigger was in charge of the Freedman's Bureau after the close of the war. Both were first taken out and tied to trees. In the same county, October, 1870, the store of David J. Robertson, brother of Senator Robertson, was burned by the Ku Klux. In Newberry county, a Mr. Leahey, Probate Judge, was notified that he must leave. A county commissioner was visited by the Ku-Klux, and ordered to leave. In September, 1870, a negro, the captain of a militia company, was cut with a knife in a rencontre with a Mr. Chappell.

In Spartansburg county, September 10, 1870, Jordan Blayton and daughter were whipped. Gabriel Ostell, colored man, whipped. Clement Bowden, colored man, whipped severely at night by men in disguise. Minerva Bowden, colored, also whipped. Wm. Champion, white, justice of the peace, was whipped in Limestone township, sixteen miles from Spartansburg, October, 1870. D. Lipscomb, whipped severely; R. Irving shot through the shoulder by men in disguise. Lipscomb and Irving were managers of elections. C. Harry Price, white, constable and deputy censustaker, was whipped by men in disguise; Hugh A. Clover, constable, was shot; Moses Eaves was whipped; Nathaniel Johnson was shot down and killed; the Ku-Klux shot into the house of Mr. McKinney, near Spartansburg; Dr. J. Winn Smith, in Spartansburg county, was shot; Wallace Fowler, colored, living near Glen Spring, and aged about 70, was shot in the head with a pistol; Mr. Lender was very severely whipped; Messrs. Surrott, Lendenand Bowden, with their families, came to town because they were not safe where they lived.

In York county, November, 1870, Mr. Roundtree, negro, was killed at night by men in disguise; Anderson Brown and another negro, ditto; Mr. Williams, negro, captain of a militia company, hung by disguised men; Messrs. White and Hambright were whipped.

In Clarendon county, John Plowden was taken out of his house by armed and disguised men who whipped him and left him tied in a swamp; J. W. McCloud was whipped; Mr. Rame was warned to leave; afterwards his goods, etc., were burned; Leander A. Bigger, who was first attacked in December, 1870 was attacked a second time, "bucked," and warned to leave; his friend Parker was cruelly tied to a tree and left to starve. The Ku Klux robbed both of their pocket-books and revolvers; Mr. Lemon, county commissioner, was assassinated two miles from Manning.

The following is a brief synopsis of a portion of the testimony taken in Washington by the Select Committee:

Judge Richard B. Carpenter, of South Carolina, late candidate for Governor of that State on the so-called Reform (Democratic) ticket, against Governor Scott, (Republican,) having been called by the Democratic members of the Congressional Committee on Ku Klux Outrages, was sworn and examined, testifying that he had held the office of Register of Bankruptcy and Judge of the First Circuit; that, as the candidate of the "Reform" Convention for the Governorship, he had canvassed the State for that position; that he had canvassed every county of the State thoroughly, except the county of Horry, and had become thoroughly acquainted with the situation of the people of both colors. He said: "There have unquestionably been many cases of violence. I have no doubt of the existence, in eight or ten counties, of some secret organization;" but was not certain that it was not more widely disseminated than that. He thinks this secret organization, by which these outrages have been committed in his State, was in existence in York, Chester, Fairfield, Spartansburg, Union, Laurens, Abbeville, Newberry, Edgefield, and Clarendon counties. He admitted that it might have been in existence in other parts of the State, but did not think it had much more extensive existence in the State; he did think, however, that at one time it threatened to extend over a large area. He believed it was a military organization, and showed itself in first warning its subjects, of some supposed offense, and directing them to leave the country, or to vacate their offices, as the case might be. If they did not do that, he thought they followed it up by personal violence in many instances. He thought that when they appeared for the purpose of carrying anything into execution it was the general and universal practice for them to go in disguise, it being his understanding they were bodies of armed men in disguise and operating in the night time. He said his idea of the class of men composing this organization was that "a great many of them were very respectable men in the neighborhood where they lived, and not confined to a low or desperate class of people." When informed that in this particular he disagreed with some witnesses from his State, he replied that his own impression was that "very good men were in that organization, and concurred and aided in these acts of violence." He stated that he did not think it altogether true that the men of substance and respectability of all parties always disapproved of it and spoke against it, and that he still thought, for a variety of reasons that he could not detail, that a great many respectable and well-meaning men were engaged in it. He admitted it as his conviction that respectable people, people of substance, not only approved of it, but actually participated in it.

He admitted that these organizations, these bands of disguised men, committed a great many acts of violence, such as whipping, beating, killing, &c. He thought they were not confined to persons who held official positions, but yet it was frequently the case that they were directed against those. He said there was no doubt that certain "bad men" have assumed the garb of this brotherhood to gratify private malice and cover private lawlessness; and he said he believes this because certain cases seemed so at variance with their ordinary plan of procedure that he could not otherwise account for it. He said wherever the organization had been you can see in the line of conduct they have Pursued a great deal of regularity and method. [Our witness seems to regard the "regularity and method" of "the brotherhood" as such redeeming virtues that all their whippings, burnings, and even murders are not sufficient to place them in the category of "bad men."]

He heard of disturbances in the upper part of the State; there was intimidation there in 1868, and no doubt some violence. He said the political sentiments of the colored people of South Carolina are unquestionably Republican, an overwhelming majority; there are very few white voters in South Carolina who vote the Republican ticket; and an overwhelming majority of the whites are Democrats. He thought Gov. Scott knew that, in any armed conflict between the two races, the blacks would go down, and that the controlling and leading men of the Republican party, whether white or black, did not want an armed conflict. He said the great mass of votes he received were given by Democrats. He did not know of any case where any colored military company ever made an attack on any white or anybody else. He did not know when the Ku Klux outrages commenced in South Carolina, but knew that outrages were perpetrated in the upper counties in the election of 1868; he thought he heard of bands of disguised men going about then, but did not think that after the November election in 1868 there was any violence at all of that kind in the State. He did not hear of any until after the election of 1870. He was of the opinion that the local causes that led to this Kukluxing did not exist prior to 1868. He traced those disturbances to a very different source than the Ku Klux. He thought they were then confined to "desperate men." He defended three or four of them, and said he had very good reason to know that the operations spoken of there were by those "bands of lawless men." He thought this organization (Ku Klux) in South Carolina was of a later date, and of a different character. He said all the Ku Klux outrages have been perpetrated upon Republicans as a general thing. He admitted that where Republicans had not the power, or where everything has been largely the other way, there has been no Ku Kluxing. He never heard an outrage where the colored vote is very small, nor of any charges against the organization in question. Witness tells of a man in Clarendon, whom the Ku Klux, after tearing down his store and injuring his goods, waited upon and handled roughly, making him leave. He admitted it was an "error of judgment" for "good and well-meaning men" in disguises to continue this system of applying the lash to the negroes; he did not think it tends to harmonize anything, to do any good, or to remedy any evil. He said these Ku Klux organizations existed in the middle and the eastern portion of the State. He said there was no doubt at all that there was a general combined effort on the part of the whites by kind treatment and conciliation of the colored people during the election canvass of 1870 to induce them to vote the "reform" ticket; and admits that there was a sudden outbreak of Ku Klux outrages, culminating in numerous acts of violence, almost immediately after the election, the "reform" ticket having been defeated. That is, when the Democracy of the State found it useless to try to coax the negroes to vote their ticket, they at once threw off the mask.

EXCITEMENT AT HYDE PARK.

A PORTION OF THE CITY SINKING INTO A COAL MINE—MANY BUILDINGS DAMAGED.

SCRANTON, PA., Nov. 16—Hyde Park has again been visited by one of those catastrophes peculiar to mining regions. About 3 o'clock this morning the citizens of that portion of our city lying south of Main street, and in the neighborhood of Scranton avenue, were startled from their slumbers by a rumbling, crashing noise, and a trembling of the earth and their buildings, as if by an earthquake. So violent were the shocks and so loud the noise, that they fled terror-stricken from their dwellings. After the first paroxysm of fright had passed, the cause of the terrible alarm became apparent. The mines of the first vein of the Oxford shaft had given way, causing the earth to settle some two feet, and forming great cracks in the surface. The area of ground, which is thickly coverd by buildings and handsome dwellings, is about twenty acres, extending from Main street at a point west of the Welsh Calvinistic church running diagonally northeast to Chestnut street. This boundary of the fall is marked by a crack which varies in width and depth.

This crack passing through the front yard of the Welsh Calvanistic Church goes through the dwelling and store of Mr. Thomas Phillips, Herman's Hotel, and the adjoining property, breaking their walls and rocking the buildings from cellar to garret. Crossing Scranton avenue, it crosses the corner of Fellow's Hall building, breaking open the foundation walls and causing a large opening in the brick wall, and in fact injuring the entire building. From this point it runs in an easterly direction, through the property of Dr. Heath, Daniel Howell, D. T. Richards, Esquire Snyder and others to Chestnut street; thence diagonally to Scranton avenue, where tracks of the fall are lost. But the effects of the fall are still visible in the settling of the earth about Mr. Herman's residence and other dwellings between this point and the place from which we first started.

In all of the buildings, and particularly those of Messrs. Phillips, Richards, Howell, the hotel and Odd Fellow's hall, are the destructive effect of this disaster most clearly visible, as hardly any part of them remains uninjured. Walls and ceilings, broken floors, sunken windows, broken wainscoting torn loose, while cisterns, wells and cellars have literally lost their bottoms, causing a destruction of property amounting to $30,000.

There were three distinct shocks, each one loud enough to arouse everybody. In a few minutes Main street was crowded with men, women, and children, who were greatly frightened. When the residence of Mr. D. T. Richards was shaken, the family were compelled to flee in order to save their lives; so great was the destruction that the house must be rebuilt. The Herman's house is so badly damaged that it must be torn down. The postoffice has sunk some eighteen inches, and still continues settling. A large cistern in the kitchen of Daniel Howell was pierced, and is now dry. In fact, not a drop of water can be had in any cistern in any part of the injured portion. The houses of J. H. Millspaugh, William Price, Judge W. G. Ward, S. Mears and Mr. Ashby were also badly damaged. That of Edward Herman's settled down eighteen inches below the surface, but otherwise is comparatively uninjured.

The Oxford shaft is situated in the centre of the Hyde Park, and is the property of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western company, having been purchased by them in 1868 from Selden, Scranton & Co. The vein which caused such a terrible scare this morning is known as the Diamond vein, and has not been worked by the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Company. On that ground they claim that no damages will be paid, and if the losers will insist, the former owners must bear the brunt. The fall which occurred some four years ago in another portion of Hyde Park at which time so much damage was done, was not near so disastrous in its results.

VACCINATION.

The Use of Secondary Lymph.

Our Manchester correspondent writes that the extent to which revaccination has been practised in Manchester during the last few months, has afforded rare opportunities for deciding some questions which were before held by some to be still sub judice; for example, the custom which has prevailed among the mill owners of having all their work people vaccinated, has settled the question of value of secondary lymph as compared with virgin lymph. Out of many similar experiences, the following may be quoted by way of illustration. A fortnight ago a surgeon vaccinated 300 operatives; in 150 of those cases he employed virgin lymph; in the remaining 150, secondary lymph was used. The first series gave the following results; 19 cases were unsuccessful; in 16 cases, small papules and spurious vesicles resulted, while the remaining 115 showed well-marked primary vesicles. The second series gave very different results; for out of them 50 were entirely unsuccessful, 86 terminated in papules and small spurious vesicles, and only 14 yielded true primary vesicles.—Brit. Med. Journal, August 19, 1871.

THE OAK CROP.

The pork packers at Cincinnati, Louville, St. Louis and other points have already commenced operations.

The following is a statement of the number of hogs six months old and over listed for taxation, April 1, in Ohio, Kentucky, Illinois, Iowa and Missouri, which are the only Western States that compile these statistics, for a number of years. The following is the comparison for the three years:

	1871.	1871.	1869
Ohio	2,164,403	1,720,113	1,455,945
Kentucky	914,866	910,626	715,685
Illinois	2,908,794	2,230,951	2,036,204
Iowa	4,005,611	799,199	679,703
Missouri	2,513,997	2,195,541	1,991,264
Total	9,541,796	7,856,121	9,878,901

This shows an increase over last year of 27½ ₩ cent. in three States, and from the reports obtained from Indiana, Kansas, Nebraska and Wisconsin, we have no doubt that the increase of these States is fully up to the above average.

GEN. FRANZ SIGEL, who was nominated by the Republicans for Register, of the city of New York, was elected by the magnificent majority of 25,000.

This was a glorious triumph for a good man and a brave soldier. The Germans of the city rallied to his support almost to a man.

THE AMERICAN WASHER?

PRICE $5.50

THE AMERICAN WASHER SAVES MONEY, TIME, AND DRUDGERY.

The Fatigue of Washing Day no Longer Dreaded, but Economy, Efficiency, and Clean Clothing, Sure.

In calling public attention to this little machine, a few of the invaluable qualities, (not possessed by any other washing machine yet invented,) are here enumerated.

It is the smallest, most compact, most portable, most simple in construction, most easily operated. A child ten years old, with a few hours' practice, can thoroughly comprehend and effectually use it. There is no adjusting, no screws to annoy, no delay in adapting! It is always ready for use! It is a perfect little wonder! It is a miniature giant, doing more work and of a better quality, than the most elaborate and costly. One half of the labor is fully saved by its use, and the clothes will last one-half longer than by the old plan of the rub board. It will wash the largest blanket. Three shirts at a time, washing thoroughly! In a word, the ablution of any fabric, from a Quilt to a Lace Curtain or Cambric Handkerchief, are equally within the capacity of the LITTLE GEM! It can be fastened to any tub and taken of at will

No matter how deep rooted a prejudice may exist against Washing Machines, the moment this little machine is seen to perform its wonders, all doubts of its cleansing efficacy and utility are banished, and the doubter and detractor at once becomes the fast friends of the machine.

We have testimonials without end, setting forth its numerous advantages over all others, and from hundreds who have thrown aside the unwieldy, useless machines, which have signally failed to accomplish the object promised in prominent and loud sounding advertisements.

It is as perfect for washing as a wringer is for wringing. The price another paramount inducement to purchasers, has been placed so low that it is within the reach of every housekeeper and there is no article of domestic economy that will repay the small investment so soon.

All that is asked for this GREAT LABOR SAVER, is a fair trial We guarantee each machine to do its work perfectly.

STORM AND SUNSINE.

I ran across what first struck me as a very singular genius, on my road from Springfield to Boston. This was a stout, black whiskered man, who sat immediately in front of me, and who indulged, from time to time, in the most strange and unaccountable manœuvres. Every now and then he would get up and hurry away to the narrow passage which leads to the door in these drawing-room cars, and when he thought himself secure from observation would go to laughing in the most violent manner, and continue the healthful exercise until he was as red in the face as a lobster. As we neared Boston these demonstrations increased in violence, save that the stranger no longer ran away to laugh, but kept his seat and chuckled to himself with his chin deep in his shirt collar. But the changes that those portmanteaus underwent! He moved them there, here, everywhere, he put them behind him, in front of him, on each side of him. He was evidently getting ready to leave, but, as we were yet 25 miles from Boston, the idea of such early preparation was ridiculous. If we had entered the city then the mystery would have been unsolved, but the stranger at last became so excited that he could keep his seat no longer. Some one must help him, and as I was the nearest he selected me. Suddenly turning, as if I had asked a question, he said, rocking himself to and fro in his chair the meantime, and slapping his legs, and breathing hard, "Been gone three years?"

"Ah!"

"Yes, been in Europe. Folks don't expect me for six months yet, but I got through and started. I telegraphed them at the last station; they've got it by this time."

As he said this he changed the portmanteau on his left leg to the right, and the one on the right to the left again.

"Got a wife!" said I.

"Yes, and three children," he returned, and he got up and folded his overcoat anew, and hung it over the back of the seat.

"You are pretty nervous over the matter, ain't you!" I said, watching his fidgety movements.

"Well, I should think so," he replied; "I hain't slept soundly for a week. And do you know," he went on, glancing around at the passengers, and speaking in a low tone, "I am almost certain train will run off the track and break my neck, before I get to Boston. Well, the fact is, I have had too much good luck for one man, lately. The thing can't last; 'taint natural that it should, you know. I've watched it. First it rains, then it shines, then it rains again. It rains so hard you think its never going to stop; then it shines so bright you think its always going to shine; and just as you're settled in either belief, you are knocked over by a change, to show that you know nothing at all about it."

"It's curious," he returned, "but the only thing which makes me think I will get through safe, is, because I think I won't."

"Well, that is curious," said I.

"Yes," he replied; "I'm a machenist—made a discovery—nobody believed in it; spent all my money trying to bring it out—mortgaged my home—all went. Everybody laughed at me—everybody but my wife—spunky little woman—said she would work her fingers off before I should give it up. Went to England—no better there; came within an ace of jumping off London bridge. Went into a shop to earn money enough to come home with; there I met the man I wanted. To make a long story short, I've bro't £30,00 home with me and here I am."

"Good for you?" I exclaimed.

"Yes," said he, "£30,000; and the best of it is, she don't know anything about it. I've fooled her so often, and disappointed her so much, that I just concluded I would say nothing about this. When I got my money, though, you better believe I struck a bee line for home."

"And now you will make her happy," said I.

"Happy!" he replied, "why you don't know anything about it. She's worked like a dog while I have been gone, trying to support herself and the children decently. They paid her 13 cents a piece for making coarse shirts; and that's the way she'd live half the time. She'll come down there to the depot to meet me, in a gingham dress, and a shawl a hundred years old, and she'll think she's dressed up. Oh, she won't have no clothes after this—oh, no, I guess not!"

And with these words, which implied that his wife's wardrobe would soon rival Queen Victoria's, the stranger tore down the passage way again, and getting in his old corner, where he thought himself out of sight, went through the strangest pantomime, laughing, putting his mouth into the drollest shapes, and then swinging himself back and forth in the limited space, as if he were "walking down Broadway," a full-rigged metropolitan belle. And so on till we rolled into the depot, and I placed myself on the other car, opposite the stranger, who, with a portmanteau in each hand, had descended and was standing on the lowest step, ready to jump to the platform. I looked from his face to the faces of the people before us, but saw no sign of recognition. Suddenly he cried, "There they are," and laughed outright, but in a hysterical sort of a way, as he looked over the crowd. I followed his eyes, and saw, some distance back, as if crowded out, shouldered away by the well-dressed and elbowing throng, a little woman in a faded dress and well worn hat, with a face almost painful in its intense but hopeless expression, glancing rapidly from window to window as the coaches glided by. She had not yet seen the stranger; but a moment after she caught his eye, and in another instant he had jumped to the platform with his two portmanteaus, and making a hole in the crowd, pushing one here and there, and running plump into the well developed stomach of a venerable looking old gentleman in spectacles, he rushed toward the place where she was standing. I think I never saw a face assume so many different expressions in so short a time as did that little woman while her husband was on his way to her. She didn't look pretty. On the contrary she looked very plain, but some way I felt a big lump rise in my throat as I watched her.—She was trying to laugh; but, God bless her, how completely she failed in the attempt. Her mouth got into the position; but it never moved after that, save to draw down the corners and quiver, while she blinked her eyes so fast that I suspect she only caught occasional glimpses of the broad shouldered fellow who elbowed his way so rapidly towards her. And then, as he drew close, and dropped those everlasting portmanteaus, she just turned completely round, with her back towards him, and covered her face with her hands. And thus she was when the strong man gathered her up in his arms as if she had been a baby, and held her sobbing to his breast. There were enough gaping at them, heaven knows, and I turned my eyes away a moment, and then I saw two boys in threadbare roundabouts standing near, wiping their eyes and noses on their little coat sleeves, and bursting out anew at every fresh demonstration on the part of their mother. When I looked at the stranger again he had his hat drawn down over his eyes; but his wife was looking up at him, and it seemed as if the pent-up tears of those weary months of waiting were streaming through his eyelids.

STEPHEN GIRARD.—"During long commercial experience," says Girard, "I have noticed that no advantage results from telling one's business to others, except to create jealousy or competition when we are fortunate, and to gratify our enemies when otherwise." He was never known to disregard this theory in all his protracted career as one of the greatest and most successful of merchants.

AN eleven year old boy of Kansas City, Mo., has just finished a walk to Houston, Texas, a distance of 1,000.

To Dispeptics,
To Sufferers from Liver Complaint,
To those having no Appetite,
To those with broken down Constitutins
To Nervous People,

To any with debilitated digesti'e Organs

Or suffering with any of the following Symptoms, which indicate Disordered Stomach or Liver.

such as Constipation, Inward Piles, Fullness or Blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for food, Fullness or Weight in the Stomach, Sour Fructations, Sinking or Fluttering at Pit of the Stomach, Swimming of the Head, Hurried and difficult breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or suffocating Sensations when in a Lying Posture, Dimness of Vision, Dots or Webs before the Sight, Fever and Dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of Perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, &c., Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil, and Great Depression of Spirits.

Hoofland's Germaa Bitters.

A Bitters without Alcohol or Spirits of any kind.

Is different from all others. It is composed of the pure Juices, or VITAL PRINCIPLE OF ROOTS, HERBS, and BARKS, (or, as medicinally termed, Extracts,) the worthless or inert portions of the ingredients not being used. Therefore in one Bottle of this Bitters there is contained as much medicinal virtue as will be found in several gallons or ordinary mixtures. The Roots, &c., used in this Bitters are grown in Germany, their vital principles extracted in that country by a scientific Chemist, and forwarded to the manufactory in this city, when they compounded and bottled. Containing no spirituous ingredients, this Bitters is free from the objections urged against all others: no desire for stimulants can be induced from their use, they cannot make drunkards, and cannot under any circumstances, have any but a beneficial effect.

Hoofland's German Tonic.

Was compounded for those not inclined to extreme bitters, and is intended for use in cases when some alcoholic stimulant is required in connection with the Tonic properties of the Bitters. Each bottle of the tonic contains one bottle of the Bitters, combined with pure SANTA CRUZ RUM, and flavored in such a manner that the extreme bitterness of the bitters is overcome forming a preparation highly agreeable and pleasant to the palate, and containing the medicinal virtues of the Bitters. The price of the Tonic is $1,50 per Bottle, which many persons think too high. They must take into consideration that the stimulant used is guaranteed to be of a pure quality. A poor article could be furnished at a cheaper price, but is it not better to pay a little more and have a good article? A medicinal preparation should contain none but the best ingredients; and they who expect to obtain a cheap compound, and be benefitted by it, will most certainly be cheated.

HON. GEORGE W. WOODWARD, formerly Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania at present Member of Congress from Pennsylvania, writes:

PHILADELPHIA, March 16, 1871.

I find "Hoofland's German Bitters" is a good tonic, useful in diseases of the digestive organs, and of great benefit in case of debility and want of nervous action in the system. Yours, truly,
GEO. W. WOODWARD.

HON. JAS. THOMPSON, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania,

PHILADELPHIA, April 28, 1867.

I consider "Hoofland's German Bitters" a valuable medicine in case of attacks of indigestion or Dyspepsia. I can certify this from my own experience of it.
Yours, with respect, JAS. THOMPSON.

HON. GEORGE SHARSWOOD, Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, June 1, 1868.

I have found by experience that "Hoofland's German Bitters" is a very good tonic, relieving dyspeptic symptoms almost directly.
GEORGE SHARSWOOD

HON. JAS. M. WOOD, Ex-Mayor of Williamsport, Pa.

I take great pleasure in recommending "Hoofland's German Tonic" to any one who may be afflicted with Dyspepsia. I had the Dyspepsia so badly it was impossible to keep any food on my stomach, and I became so week, as not to be able to walk half a mile. Two bottles of Tonic effected a perfect cure. JAMES M. WOOD.

REMEMBER

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN REMEDIES

Are the medicines you require to purify the Blood, excite the torpid Liver to healthy action, and to enable you to pass safely through any hardships or exposure.

DR. HOOFLAND'S
PODOPHYLLIN,
Or Substitue for Mercury Pills.
TWO PILLS A DOSE.
The Most Powerful, Yet Innocent Vegetable Cathartic Known.

It is not necessary to take a handful of these Pills to produce the desired effect; two of them act quickly and powerfully, cleansing the Liver, Stomach and Bowels all impurities. The principal ingredient is Podophyllin, or the Alcoholic Extract of Mandrake, which is by many times more powerful, acting and searching than the Mandrake itself. Its peculiar action is upon the Liver, cleaning it speedily from all obstructions, with all the power of Mercury, yet free from the injurious results attached to the use of that mineral.

For all diseases, in which the use of a cathartic is indicated, these pills will give entire satisfaction in every case. They NEVER FAIL.

In cases of Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia and extreme costiveness, Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters or Tonic should be used in connection with the Pills. The tonic effect of the Bitters or Tonic builds up the system. The Bitters or Tonic purifies the Blood, strengthens the Nerves, REGULATES the Liver, and gives strength, energy and vigor.

Keep your Bowels active with the Pills, and tone up the system with Bitters or Tonic, and no disease can remain long hold, or ever assail you.

Recollect that it is DR. HOOFLAND'S GERMAN REMEDIES that are so universally used and highly recommended; and do not allow the Druggist to induce you to take anything else that he may say is just as good, because he makes a larger profit on it. These Remedies will be sent by Express to any locality, upon application to the PRINCIPAL OFFICE, at the GERMAN MEDICINE STORE, 631 Arch St., Philadelphia.

Medical.

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,
For restoring Grey Hair to its natural Vitality & Color.

A dress which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Fresh or gray hair is restored to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparation dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a
HAIR DRESSING,
nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

We Must Work.

Every man builds his own house; builds it many chamberd, fresh-ventilated, picture-hung, vine-wreathed, guest-full; or, low-pent, bare wall, flowerless, inhospitable—just in accordance with his inner nature. Precisely as the internal force of affinity in the Mollusk lays hold of and aggregates round itself the fine lime particles in the sea water, so does the internal force in the human soul lay hold of and aggregate around itself what it wants. The surrounding ocean holds in solution knowledge, pleasure, meat, drink, wit wisdom, friends, flowers, God; and out of this wealth we secrete our shells—clam-shells or nautilus-shells, as we crave—fun, if we have a zest for the funny; friends, if we long for friends; beauty, if we love beauty; thought, if we tend to thought. Slowly we build up our house, small or large; if we are refined, it is refined; if we are roomy, it is roomy.

TROUBLE.—If all our troubles were single, few men would complain of them. But when they come in flocks, and crowds; then people cry out against us. But do they not always come single; and do we not keep them; and pile them up; and put yesterday's troubles upon to-day's, and anticipate the troubles of to-morrow, till we break down under them. Troubles do not hunt in packs, like hounds, but come single, and can be met one by one, and conquered or borne. A wood-pile cannot be carried in the arms, but separate it into single sticks, and a child can say to it, "be thou removed to yonder place," and it shall be done. So troubles, in bulk, cannot be borne, but trouble, taken as it comes, day by day is ballast, keeping the mind steady when the gales stiffen, and sends us on with a quicker motion on the roughened waters.

INDUSTRY.—Man must have occupation; or be miserable. Toil is the price of sleep and appetite; of health and enjoyment. The very necessity which overcomes our natural sloth is a blessing. The whole world dose not contain even a briar or thorn which Nature could have spared. We are happier with the sterility, which we can overcome by industry, than we could have been with spontaneous plenty and unbounded profusion. The body and the mind are improved by the toil that fatigues them. The toil is a thousand times rewarded by the pleasures which it bestows. Its enjoyments are peculiar. No wealth can purchase them no indolence can taste them. They flow only from the exertions which repay the laborer;

A GOOD DAUGHTER.—There are other ministers of love more conspicuous than she, but none in whom a gentler, lovelier spirit dwells, and none to which the heart's warm requitals more joyfully respond. She is the steady light of her father's house. He idea is indissolubly connected with that of his fireside. She is his morning sunlight and evening star. The grace, vivacity and tenderness of her sex have their place in the mighty sway which she holds over his spirit. She is the pride and ornament of his hospitality, and the gentle nurse in his sickness.

LIFE'S CHANGES.—At almost every step in life we meet with young men from whom we anticipate wonderful things but of whom, after careful inquiry we never hear a false brilliancy which makes fools of themselves and other people. Like certain chintzes, calicoes and ginghams they show finely on their first newness but cannot stand the sun and the rain and assume a very sober aspect after washing day.

THOSE who have resources within themselves who can dare to live alone, want friends the least, but, at the same time, best know how to prize them the most. But no company is far preferable to bad, because we are more apt to catch the vices of others than their virtues, as the disease is far more contagious than death.

A YOUTH who starts out in life with an earnest determination to be honest; upright, faithful to all trust; punctual; attentive; and above all God-fearing, has a promise of abundant success. Though he be without money or wealthy friends; he will be sure to gain all that he most desires.

NO WORDS can describe the wonderful and continually enlarging blessings in Christ which have been poured into the souls of many of the children of God through the simple, unreasoning faith which praise confidently and with ever-increasing trust.

MERITORIOUS.—Messrs. Anderson & Hale, Agents for the Liverpool, London and Globe Insurance Co., last week, insured the new Hose and Engine House of the Undine Fire Company, in this place, for $1000, free of charge. This was a meritorious act, and should commend these young men to the property holders of the town and county.

THE EDITOR AMONG THE HOGS AGAIN.—We spoke, last week, of the large and fat hogs belonging to J. M. Wagner & Co., at the Lower Mill. They are worth seeing. Since that time we have taken a peep into the pens of J. Fellenbaum, D. K. Tate, H. P. Harris, Isaac Lose, John Lonebarger, Benj. Schrock, John Wolf and Cyrus Strickland. These men have each a nice lot of hogs, looking finely, and so fat that they care little about their feed. Indeed, they are so fat and lazy that we think they ought to be killed. We would not suggest, however, the same punishment for the lazy editor of the Watchman or Reporter.—The sausage season will soon be here, when we expect to reap a rich harvest in sausages. We pity the Editors of the Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin, for, judging from their constant grumblings, the poor fellows never see or taste sausage. If they will come to Bellefonte, we will divide.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On Sunday last, near Philipsburg, David Smith, son of Geo. Smith, of Pennsvalley came to his death by accidentally shooting himself. The particulars as near as we could learn are as follows: About one week prior to his death, he in company with three or four others, had gone out to hunt for deer. On Sunday morning they started for home. While on the way from their camp to Philipsburg, their dogs started a deer. David Smith jumped from the wagon and ran a short distance into the woods, where in order to get a view of the deer he jumped upon a stump at the same time setting the stock of his gun upon the stump. In his anxiety to see the deer he let his gun slip, the hammer striking the stump discharged the whole contents of his gun into his right side. They entered the right side, passed through his body coming out through or near the left shoulder. He never spoke after the accident.

DEDICATION.—The new church near Eagle Iron Works, Boggs township, this county, was dedicated to the service of Almighty God, on Sunday, the 12th inst., according to previous announcement, under the name and title of the Shiloh Church of the Evangelist Association of Pleasant Hill. At an early hour the roads were thronged with anxious people wending their way to the neat little Sanctuary, to participate in the solemn exercises of giving the house they had erected, to the great Head of the Church. At the hour of 10 o'clock, A. M., the Rev. George Hunter, of Williamsport, Pa., appeared in the pulpit to preach the Dedicatory sermon. His text was, "Their rock is not our rock, though our enemies themselves be the judges." The sermon was characteristic of the man, profound, eloquent and pathetic, and was, in every particular, a sermon which would have done honor to a Bishop, and will be remembered by that audience for years to come.

The Rev's Bennington and Stover also participated in the exercises. Rev Bennington announced that there were liabilities against the church to the amount of $273.35. After the sermon, an appeal was made to the intelligent audience, and in a very short time over $300 were raised. The dedicatory services having ended, and after a short prayer the congregation was dismissed.

We cannot close this notice without remarking that great credit is due C. Curtin, H. L. Barnhart, and D. C. Ammerman, Esqrs., and others, for the interest manifested in the success of this church edifice, aiding, not only by their money, but by incessant labor.

THE LYCOMING INSURANCE COMPANY.—The Watsontown Record says: A number of our wealthy citizens and business men have their property insured in the Lycoming Mutual Insurance Company. They publicly declare they will not pay the 12½ per cent. assessment the company has laid, unless compelled to do so by law. The Secretary is sending notices to those holding policies in this company, which gives the amount, in dollars and cents, of their assessment, and states that the amount will have to be paid on or before the 22nd day of this month, or receivers will be appointed. We understand funds are being raised by policy-holders in Lycoming county with the intention of employing counsel to resist the demands of the company. The objection raised against the assessment is that destroyed Chicago property was insured on the stock plan, and mutual policy-holders contend that they are not bound to pay assessments for the purpose of liquidating losses of that kind.

COAL OIL, for sale at Green's.

A SWINDLER.—Several parties near this city and in the county, have been swindled lately by a man who carries a printed card, on which he states he has a large optical establishment, No. 256, Williamsport, Pa. He carries spectacles of an inferior order, with plated frames, and sells them to those who do not know the difference, at exhorbitant prices, promising, in case they do not suit the eye, after a few days trial, to exchange them. Several parties have been looking for his place of business, within a few days, and cannot find it. He also carri s a large piece of crystal, which he claims his glasses are manufactured from. No peddlars of spectacles are allowed to travel in Lycoming county, and any one doing so violates the law, and is subject to fine and imprisonment.—Gazette & Bulletin.

We suppose this same swindler will be in our county to impose upon our people. Turn your backs upon him, friends. There is no necessity to purchase from these traveling men, to you unknown, when you can purchase all you need, of Jewelry, Spectacles, &c., from our reliable townsmen, Frank P. Blair. See advertisement.

TREATMENT OF SMALL POX.—We clip the following from an old paper and give it for what it is worth. To us it looks reliable and we therefore call the attention of our Physicians to it.

A great discovery is said to have been recently made by a surgeon of the British army in China, in the way of an effectual remedy for small-pox. The mode of treatment is as follows: When preceding fever is at its height, and just before the eruption appears, the chest is rubbed with croton oil and tartaric ointment. This causes the whole of the eruption to appear on that part of the body to the relief of the rest. It also secures a full and complete eruption, and thus prevents the disease from attacking the internal organs. This is now the established mode of treatment in the English army in China, and is regarded as a perfect cure.

For sore throat use the Cubob Troches, for sale at Green's.

FURNITURE.—John Brechbill, who has been engaged in the Furniture business in this place for many years, desires us to say that his stock on hand is the very best, and the prices are most reasonable. He says he is determined not to be undersold by any in the market. We know him to be a good reliable man, his word as good as his bond. It is really astonishing the amount of furniture he sells. Every day we notice wagon loads leaving his store. Remember the place is on Spring street, Bellefonte, Pa.

MUSICAL CONVENTION.—There will be a grand entertainment—music for the people, by the people—held in the M. E. Church, at Milesburg, commencing on Tuesday, 27th inst., at 10 o'clock, A. M., and will continue through Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, closing on Saturday evening with a grand vocal and instrumental concert.

Prof. Hagar has been engaged to give a series of twelve lessons in vocal music. Three lessons will be given each day. Prof Hagar carries with him, the highest testimonials as to his ability as a teacher of music; hence a rare opportunity is offered every one who may desire to learn to sing. Rev. J. W. Cleaver, Col. L. Greeno, Wm. B. Miles and Col. James F. Weaver, constitute the Committee, and through large posters, and otherwise, extend a cordial invitation to all to attend the lessons during the week, and take part in the concert on Saturday evening. They then say, "Let those who cannot sing, come and learn; let all the people come and devote one week to improvement and the studying of sacred music." We trust the Convention will prove a complete success. To this end, let every person attend. Persons attending Court, next week, should make it a point to spend their evenings in Milesburg at this Convention. To add to the interest of the Convention and Concert, we are informed that Mrs. Ira C. Mitchell has been engaged to play the piano.

"PAY UP."—The following morceau of pity, coupled with a little good advice, we copy from the American Newspaper Reporter. We thank him for his sorrow, and shall endeavor to follow the advice in the future:

"We are sorry for those publishers who are obliged to injure their journals every little while by requests to delinquent subscribers to "pay up." It has an injurious effect not only upon the business character of the paper, but encourages others to ask credit who would not have thought of such a thing without being reminded of it by these suggestive notices. Of course if B. knows that A. gets credit, he is much more likely to ask for it. Publishers would be saved a great deal of tribulation, and lose less subscribers than they suppose, by being firm in the matter. All they need is to be able to say firmly and truthfully, 'we can give you the paper, but cash is our rule, and no one has our paper on credit.'"

THE "Illustrated Phrenological Journal," is in every respect, a first-class Magazine. Its articles are of the highest interest to all. It teaches what we are and how to make the most of ourselves. The information it contains on the Laws of Life and Health, is well worth the price of the Magazine to every family. It is published at $3.00 a year, by S. R. Wells, No. 389 Broadway, New York. See Prospectus for 1872, in advertising column.

Butter and cheese are almost indispensable articles of food. Properly used, they are nutritious and healthy; but an inordinate use of either causes indigestion and dyspepsia. Parsons' Purgative Pills, Judiciously used, will remove both of these troubles.

Have you ague in the face; and is it badly swollen? Have you severe pain in the chest, back, or side? Have you cramps or pains in the stomach or bowels? Have you bilious colic or severe griping pains? If so, use Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.

DELINQUENTS.—An exchange makes the following broadsword wipe at his delinquent subscribers:

"A man may borrow money, steal from a widow, discount his own whisky bill, or "nip" a prayer book from a dying heathen, and still have some chance of pardon; but when he swindles a poor printer out of his bill, we think the devil has such a firm grip on the seat of his pantaloons that repentance and forgiveness are utterly out of the question."

HATS, HATS.—The season having arrived for the new styles of hats, we most cordially recommend to our readers, W. F. Warburton, 430, Chestnut St., Phila. Mr. Warburton is an honest, upright man, deals fairly with all, and manufactures the best and most fashionable hats. Send your measure and he will send, by express, any style of hat you may order. See card in another column.

FOUR EVILS.—Whoever habitually uses any alcoholic preparations as an "appetizer" will be likely to suffer from four evils, viz.: an overplus of food in the stomach, impaired ability to digest it, the pangs of dyspepsia, and a doctor's bill. DR. WALKER'S VEGETABLE VINEGAR BITTERS, the great Teetotal Restorative of the age, without over stimulating the palate or irritating the stomach, imparts a healthful appetite, promotes digestion, regulates the liver and bowels, purifies the blood, and thus, instead of entailing four evils, confers four inestimable benefits.

For the REPUBLICAN

EDITOR REPUBLICAN.—According to promise, I will give you a few facts relative to Akron and its vicinity. In this I will make a short historical statement of the settlement of Ohio, including an anecdote or two that happened in this county and town.

The first white child born in the State of Ohio, was living in Bethlehem, Pa., as late as 1844. She was the daughter of a Moravian Missionary by the name Heckewelder, and was born in Tuscarawas county, April 16th, 1781. This occurred about ninety years ago, when the white population of Ohio must have been but few in number—and was two years before the claims of the English Monarch to this Territory, were added to the United States. I know of two persons now living in Centre county, who were then one and two years old, namely: Mrs. Robert Steel, of Bellefonte, and Mr. John Zimmerman, of Zion.

The entire country between the Allegheny and Rocky Mountains was originally held by French power, known as the Louisiana claim. This claim was ceded by France to Great Britain in 1763. Seventeen years after this, there were 5000 free male inhabitants of full age, who were then entitled to a Territorial Legislature, which convened Sept. 16th 1799. In the year 1802, Ohio became one of the Federal States.

After the claims of Great Brittain were adjusted, and State Rights obtained, there still remained the claims of the original settlers—the Indian savages.—Legislation would not pacify them, and numerous were the deeds of horror and torture committed upon the pioneers of this State.

Last July I attended a pioneer meeting held annually in this county. At these meeting the various farming implements used 50 and 60 years ago, are exhibited, anecdotes of narrow escapes and hard times related, and in general, how people "used to live."

The meetings are well attended and quite interesting. Almost every school boy has heard of Capt. Samuel Brady, Indian fighter, and the great leap he made across the Cuyahoga River, when pursued by a gang of Indians.

This occurred within a few miles of Akron. I have frequently examined the spot, and will here state the facts as history gives it:

It was in the year 1770, a large party of warriors murdered several families, when Brady summoned a party of white men to pursue the murderers. Although Brady made his approaches with the utmost caution, the Indians, expecting a pursuit, were on the look-out and ready to receive him with numbers four-fold to those of Brady's, whose only safety was in hasty retreat, which, from the ardor of the pursuit, soon became a perfect flight. Brady directed his men to seperate, and each one to take care of himself; but the Indians knowing B—, and having a most inveterate hatred and dread of him from the numerous chastisements which he had inflicted upon them, left all the others, and, with united strength, pursued him alone. The Indians, by extending their line to the right and left, forced him on to the bank of the Cuyahoga. Brady knowing every turn of the river, directed his course to a spot where the whole stream is compressed, by the rocky cliffs, into a narrow channel of only 22 feet across the top of the chasm, although it is considerably beneath, near the water, and about fifty feet in height above the current. Through this pass the water rushes like a race-horse, while a short distance above, the stream is fifty yards wide. As he approached the chasm, Brady, knowing that life or death was in the effort, concentrated his mighty powers and leaped the stream at a single bound. The Indians were 'taken down,' but, nevertheless, shot the bounty jumper, when on the other side, wounding him in the hip.

The Indians having to make a considerable circuit before they could cross the stream, Brady advanced a good distance ahead. He now made for a large pond of water, and on account of his wound, the Indians made headway and soon were close again, when he plunged into the pond and swam under water and came up beneath the trunk of an oak tree on the opposite side. The Indians made dilligent search, and stood upon the fallen tree that secreted Brady, but could not see him. They concluded he had sunk and was drowned.

This is a good Indian story, and I think a true one. Brady and his murderous party finally escaped, but a transaction is to take place next week, November 21st, in our city, that one murderer cannot escape. It is the execution of J. H Hunter, for the killing of two aged and respectable citizens of our county. The scaffolding was brought from Cleveland to-day, and will be set in order within the walls of the prison, on Monday. I expect to feel the pulse of the culprit in his last minutes, and may give you notes of it. J. H. K.

RAILWAY MATTERS.

NORTHERN & SOURHERN WEST VIRGINIA.

OUR NEW RIALROAD TO CHICAGO.

FACTS OF INTEREST ABOUT OTHER PROJECTS.

NORTHERN AND SOUTHERN WEST VIRGINIA.

[From the Weston Democrat.]

On the 31st ult, a meeting of the corporators of the Northern and Southern West Virginia Railroad Company was held at Clarksburg. The charter of this company required a previous subscription of one hundred thousand dollars in land or money to the capital stock before an organization could be made. Of this stock the citizens of Harrison, Lewis, Braxton and Clay counties subscribed $29,200, and the residue was subscribed by wealthy citizens of New York, who already have a large interest in West Virginia. This being done, the stockholders organized and elected Albert L. Catlin, of Burlington, Vt., John Brannon, of Weston, G. D. Camden, of Clarksburg, Edmund Blanchard, of Bellefote, Pa., Charles J. Martin, Lucien Birdseye, Oliver E. Wood and Edward M. Morgan, of New York city, and Benjamin W. Byrne, of Clay Court House, Directors of said company. A meeting of the Directors will be held shortly in Clarksburg, at which a President and Vice President of the company will be elected.

It is the purpose under this charter to build a railroad from the Pennsylvania line via Charleston to the Kentucky State line. It is the hope, and every effort will be made to enlist the Pennsylvania Central Railroad Company in this enterprise, with a view to a connection with that road at or near Greensburg, in that State. This being accomplished, a short and the most practical and direct railroad line is obtained from New York city to Memphis; and the part of the line in this State, with a short distance in Pennsylvania, is the only link to the consummation of this grand continental railroad line, reaching from New York city via Memphis, El Paso to San Diego, on the Pacific coast. The road from Memphis to San Diego, we all know, is soon to be built, under the patronage of the Federal Government.

To enlist the Pennsylvania Central Company, the stockholders, at their meeting at Clarksburg adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That the President and Directors of this Company be instructed to propose to the President and Directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to construct or aid in the construction of this Company's road upon such liberal and just terms as the said President and Directors of this Company shall deem best.

This road, if made, will pass through a continuous, unbroken coal field, from its entrance into this State to the Kentucky line, varying from the soft bituminous to cannel and splint; the splint to be used without the expensive process of coking, in smelting the iron ore, in close proximity, into iron. No other such coal field exists on either hemisphere; and this is not all. Nearly the entire line passes through an extensive belt of fertile lands, capable of sustaining a dense population, and much the larger portion in forest, embracing a growth of timber of most valuable variety. All these will find a market, and millions of dollars will thus be worked out of this contemplated work, assuring facilities for ingress and egress to the vast numbers who will inhabit the interior line of our State.

It is not claiming too much to say that the iron, coal and timber developments to be accomplished by this work should make it a subject of interest to every part of the United States. If Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New York, and elsewhere can, as they will be, furnished with iron at $18 per ton, instead of $28 per ton, the present price, it is at once a subject of general interest.

To our own people we say, do your duty and help will come. You have lands more than you need; contribute a part in order to make a security for the capitalists who will furnish the money. You all see where your interest is, and now do your duty and success will crown the effort.

We intend to make this a subject for further articles in our paper. We intend this only as an allusion to the mineral wealth on this proposed line, but shall hereafter give more specific information on that branch of the subject.

Husband's Liability for Wife's Bills.

An action was decided in Philadelphia Wednesday, by Judge Thayer, in favor of a husband who had been sued by a dry goods firm for the amount of a bill run up by his wife. Defence set up that defendant furnished his wife with an ample supply of necessaries. In the course of his charge Judge Thayer said: "It is a false and foolish notion for tradespeople to entertain that a husband is bound pay all bills contracted by his wife. No such monstrous doctrine is allowed in the law. Tradesmen must ascertain the facts and the true relations of man and wife before allowing the latter to run up bills which he is to be looked to pay." Commenting upon this exposition of law, which ought to be more familiar than it is, the Philadelphia Record thinks that when trades people come to distinctly understand it, "a very sensible step will have been accomplished towards reform in the wanton extravagance and ruinous folly which, under the meretricious impulse of the stupid despot called 'fashion,' so wastes the substance, mars the manners, deforms the persons, degrades the morals and wrecks the happiness of myriad households and individuals, not only in this community, but throughout the country."—Ex.

THE predictions of a failure of crop in the Western States in consequence of the long-continued drouth, do not seem to be fulfilled. At least the corn crop in those States is represented to be unprecedented. The yield is so great that the farmers are at a loss to know what to do with it. It is offered freely in many parts as low as twelve and fifteen cents a bushel; and in other sections they talk of building immense cribs for the purpose of storing it until a season of light crops shall enchance the price.
